Seven Children Among Those Found in Caved-In Apartment House Amid Darkness.

Ortona, Fla., September 23.—(By The Associated Press.)—Every person not a member of the national guard which has established martial law in Glades county, scene of one of the most disastrous floods in its history Saturday has been ordered to leave the county by noon tomorrow by Commander S. L. Lowry, Jr., of the 116th Florida artillery.

The move, it was explained, was due to existing sanitary conditions, which would not permit a person to live in that region until the remaining bodies and debris have been cleared.

According to the order, the step was taken to prevent sickness and disease from spreading among the remaining refugees. Water is not receding and therefore completion of the work of recovering bodies is being handicapped.

Moore Haven is included in Glades county.

BODIES UNCOVERED BY RECEDING WATERS.

Miami, Fla., September 23.—(AP)—Additional surveys and rechecks made today in the storm-devastated southeastern coast of Florida showed 365 known dead; 1,100 injured, probably 500 seriously, in hospitals, and a property loss of approximately $165,000,000.

As compiled by W. H. Combs, in charge of the bureau of missing persons here; Colonel L. S. Lowry, Jr., leader in the rescue work at Moore Haven, the Associated Press and The Miami Daily News, the deaths by cities and towns were as follows:

Moore Haven, 126.
Miami and immediate vicinity, 109.
Hollywood and immediate vicinity, 54.
Hialeah, 22.
Fort Lauderdale, 19.
Dania, 11.
Fulford, 8.
Seaboard Park, 7.
Ingleside, 3.
Hallandale, 2.
Homestead, 2.
Pompano, 2.

An accurate check of the dead at Clewiston and Progresso still remained to be made.

Property Loss Estimated.

Property loss was given as follows:
Cocoanut Grove, $100,000,000, estimated by Miami Chamber of Commerce.
Hialeah, $15,000,000, estimated by Mayor Grethen.
Hollywood and Dania $25,000,000

Coolidge Silent As Wheeler Asks New Legislation

General Counsel of Anti-Saloon League Meets President in Interview on Prohibition.

WHEELER TO BACK OPPOSITION TO VARE

Says Primaries Give New Assurance That People Will Support More Efficient Enforcement.

ANDREWS ADVOCATES LOCAL ENFORCEMENT

Washington, September 23.—(AP) The 22 national prohibition administrators in conference here with Assistant Secretary Andrews of the treasury, were urged today by the dry chief to encourage, as far as possible, under state laws, the local enforcement of the prohibition law by county officers.

The general said such a plan was in effect successfully in 40 California counties, and that while prohibition prosecutions cost these counties $51,000 in six months, the counties in turn collected $434,000 in fines and penalties.

Andrews urged administrators to seek similar action by local officers in all states which have prohibition laws permitting it.

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER.

Washington, September 23.—Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon league, went to the white house today hoping to coax from President Coolidge some timely views on prohibition as it figures in the congressional campaign, but the persuasive master mind of the prohibition forces came away leaving the president sitting unmoved on the fence where he has been obliged to take his perch because of the embarrassing fact that republican candidates this year are both wet and dry as suits their needs.

Wheeler came out of the white house saying that the drys intended to go into Pennsylvania and try to beat the republican candidate for senator, William S. Vare. They already have put up a dry senatorial candidate against Wadsworth in New York, making the election of a democrat possible and some think, probable.

Wheeler Tells of Talk.

"I called the president's attention," Wheeler said, "to the fact that the recent primaries gave new assurance that the people would support every effort of the administration for more aid and better enforcement of the prohibition law. With the nominations over, except in Rhode Island, where conventions will be held in October, only 99 out of 394 old members renamed are wet. Out of the 41 new members the best they can hope for is 18 unless the drys go to sleep at the election."

This confirms what has been repeatedly pointed out in these dispatches, that the next congress will be practically as dry as this one and that so far as one can see into the future most residents of these states will have to continue going around with their tongues hanging out or take their chances.

Wheeler odserved that the wets have overshot their mark in trying to repeal state enforcement codes, having in mind doubtless the situation in Missouri, where the king of the wets, Senator A. Reed, has turned against the impending referendum which the wets were recently demanding. Reed's discomfiture has stimulated Wheeler's dry sense of humor as nothing has in a long time. It is the drys now who are laughing at the belligerent senator who, during the senate prohibition investigation, held up a glass of water to Wheeler and pretented to blow off the foam with the salute, "here's how, Mr. Wheeler!"

Probably the real purpose of Wheeler's visit to the white house was to get the president behind the pending legislation to tighten up prohibition enforcement. Andrews pressed hard for it during the last session but without much assistance from the white house. The drys feel that a push from Coolidge will put it over.

RETAIL MERCHANTS HEAR HAAKE SPEAK ON SALES METHODS

1,300 Members of Atlanta Association Fill City Auditorium for First of Meeting Series.

Thirteen hundred members of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association including executives, department heads, and sales people, Thursday night heard Dr. A. P. Haake, general sales and advertising director of the Simmons company, of New York, expound principles of successful salesmanship at a meeting in the main hall of the city auditorium.

The occasion was the first of a series of membership meetings planned by the association for the purpose of getting sales people together for the development of ideas and to impress upon them the opportunity they have for service as salespeople. The spirit of the meetings as planned by association officers is purely educational.

When the next of the series of meetings will be held has not been decided by the association, but indications are it will be held early in the new year, with others to follow as soon as practicable. Smaller meetings of the various trade lines which make up the association will probably be developed as a result of Thursday night's session. There are twenty different trade lines represented in the association.

Musical Entertainment.

A varied program was enjoyed by the association at the auditorium meeting, starting with a buffet supper in Taft hall. After the repast, the association members were entertained in the main hall of the auditorium with a musical program. The mandolin club from M. Rich & Bros. Co., rendered a number of selections, followed by vocal numbers by G. Goettinger and Mr. Gilmer, of J. M. High company. The Misses McGaughey offered piano and violin music, and following Dr. Haake's address, dancing was enjoyed in Taft hall with music furnished by the Peerless Entertainers.

Illustrating some of his points in charts, Dr. Haake proved a convincing speaker. He first discussed the importance of overhead costs with relation to profits, showing that if the business man knows what his losses and profits are, he can increase his profits without penalizing the consumer.

"For," said Dr. Haake, "the wise merchant gets his profit by decreasing his overhead expenses rather than by raising the price of the article, and, if he knows just where he stands with regard to the overhead cost, he is generally in a position to cut some of it and bring in a neat profit for himself as a result of his foresight and business ability."

Dr. Haake advocated the charging of a regular monthly amount to each

CANDIDATES GIVEN 5 DAYS TO ENTER FOR SECOND RACE

Only City-Wide Run-Over Is To Decide Judgeship of Second Division of Police Court.

DATE FOR SECOND RACE NOT DECIDED

Two Councilmanic Posts and Education Board Position Must Be Settled in Run-Over.

The two candidates receiving the largest number of votes in each of the three city races where no candidate received a majority Wednesday will be given five days in which to qualify for a run-over election, members of the city democratic executive committee announced Thursday.

Those races in which a run-over will be necessary if both candidates qualify, judge of the second division of police court, councilman for the second ward, and member of the board of education for the tenth ward.

Official tabulation of votes showed that all other candidates had received a clear majority and the tabulation followed the unofficial vote in Thursday morning's issue of The Constitution.

In event any of the three candidates who ran second do not qualify for a run-over, no election in that race is necessary, as the candidate receiving the highest number of votes will become the nominee. The date for the run-over will be set by the democratic subcommittee after the various candidates have qualified.

Uncertain of Date.

While no announcement has been made as to the date of the run-over it is possible for the election to be held at the same time as that of the state-wide run-over election for governor. This, however, cannot be decided until candidates qualify.

Candidates in two races, Cecil G. Allen, for alderman in the second ward, and T. C. Morris, for council from the fifth ward, filed contests with the democratic executive committees. These were overruled and their opponents, Dr. P. L. Moon and J. E. Bowden, were declared nominees.

Mr. Allen in filing his contest presented affidavits to the effect that two voters had been refused the opportunity of voting. Mr. Morris filed his contest on the ground that a voter had balloted in the wrong ward. Both objections were overruled by the committee since in neither case it would change final results.

Ragsdale Thanks Voters.

I. N. Ragsdale, who received the nomination for Atlanta's new mayor, expressed his deep appreciation for the votes cast for him.

"I cannot express my appreciation of the manner in which citizens ral-

Frank Tinney Must Pay Up Or Go to Jail

Blackface Comedian Adjudged in Contempt by Justice and Ordered Arrested.

New York, September 23.—(AP)—Frank Tinney, black-face comedian, was today adjudged in contempt and his arrest ordered by Justice Dike in Brooklyn supreme court. Justice Dike ordered the sheriff to place Tinney in jaiy unless he pays forthwith $1,400 in back alimony and sheriff's fees and other costs.

Mrs. Tinney, his divorced wife, told the court that although she had made personal appeals to Tinney, he had failed to pay her anything since July 24, and that she and her son were in desperate need. When granted a divorce Mrs. Tinney was awarded $200 a week alimony.

Tinney was served with papers in the case last Saturday at the Earl Carroll theater, but failed to appear and was not represented today.

The Tinney's werer ecently reported reconciled.

MIAMI IS HIDING SCARS OF STORM; HURTS ARE DEEP

Small Declares Nation Must Not Be Misled by Courageous Purpose of Magic City's Citizens.

EPICS OF HEROISM WRITTEN IN GALE

Swiftly as City's Resources Are Being Mobilized Full Reconstruction Looms Mighty Task

BY SAM W. SMALL,
(Staff Correspondent of The Constitution.)

Miami, September 23.—(Special.)—The fine optimism reported among the solid leaders in Miami must not mislead the people of the nation. Because those men have so promptly reasserted their "unconquerable souls" that must not be taken as testimony that the calamity of Saturday last was not actually unprecedented in its direful and devastating features.

The writer of "The Destruction of Jerusalem," or that one who described "The Last Days of Pompeii," would find himself hard put to picture the violence of that hurricane and the vestigia of its fury. Those who were in it will never forget it, though they live to be centennarians. It is now inerradicable of their memories.

Comes Unannounced.

The hurricane is the invisible brute-bastard of nature, born from some womb of the seven seas, full-powered to deal terror, destruction and death wherever its ephemeral life may run.

It broadcasts no bulletins of its birth. It radios no announcement of its itinerary. It sounds no merciful warning of its power or its inevitable prey. Only science can secure premonitions of the presence and probable path of the aerial Apollyon. The barometer can presage its bulk and the anemometer can feel its pulse; but these detections are of small value to the victims that flutter feebly and vainly before the advancing besom. As in "the last day" there is no safe hiding place for man, beast, or property.

Mad Devils Amuck.

These hurricanes that sporadically assault the West Indian islands and our South Atlantic and Gulf littorals seem to have their breeding place somewhere west of the Sargasso, that mysterious dead sea in the south Atlantic ocean, that morgue of marine derelicts and ward-room of sailors' superstitions. In that direction they are first detected. From thence the furious charge of one in action is sought to be scientifically forecasted, but the hurricane sometimes swings a corner and like a cross-eyed butcher does not hit where it seems aiming.

Thought False Alarm.

This Miami hurricane, however, was predicted by the weather bureau at Washington and the warnings sent forth by the forecaster at Miami as fully as his facilities made possible. The fault of the occasion was that the people did not believe those warnings that a real hurricane of dangerous power was approaching. They had believed a like prediction in July and experienced only a slight gale that beached some light pleasure and service boats in the harbor. When the Friday warnings were posted they jumped to the conclusion that it was another "false alarm" and they would only have the lively joy of seeing the little boats slammed around the beaches by another jazzing wind. When the big wind came in many put on bathing togs and went down on the waterfront to see the show.

Made Fatal Mistake.

Some of them made a fatal mistake when they did that. Weather Observer Richard Gray and Arthur Peavy of The Daily News staff, were on duty in the station and did all in their power to warn the community of the approach of the dangerous storm. They lighted the signal tower lanterns and ran up the hurricane flags, but still the public lingered unalarmed. When the great impact came they fled in terror and some undoubtedly perished in their endeavor to reach home or safe shelter. Too much praise cannot be given to the fidelity of Mr. Gray and the courage of Mr. Peavy in the heroic efforts they made to save the lives of their fellow-citizens.

The mass of the people was out of reach of the signals and went to bed Friday night believing the big blow would subside during the night and all be well in the morning. They were rudely awakened to horror and frantic efforts to save themselves from

ALABAMA PLANE TO RUSH TYPHOID SERUM TO MIAMI

Pilot of Machine Forced Down Near Marietta Will Resume Flight This Morning.

In a new army airplane being rushed to Atlanta this morning from Montgomery, Ala., Captain H. Wier Cook, who was forced down Thursday afternoon five miles beyond Marietta by a lack of oil, which caused engine trouble, will leave today from Candler field for Miami with 50,000 units of typhoid serum for the flood sufferers.

Captain Cook left Indianapolis Thursday morning with the serum, and had to land in the afternoon when his engine ran out of oil. The pilot spent Thursday night as the guest of Colonel C. N. Danforth, head of the fourth corps area air service, and will hop off this morning for Miami in the new plane.

Colonel Danforth went to Candler field shortly after noon Thursday, where he was informed that the plane had been forced down near Marietta. He then went to Marietta to locate the plane and arrange to have its cargo transferred here by auto and another plane used to convey the serum to Florida.

Immediately after learning of the plane's landing Colonel Danforth wired Montgomery, Ala., requesting service of a national guard plane to carry the cargo of serum to the stricken Florida territory. A wire was received stating that a plane will arrive in Atlanta early this morning and complete the journey to Florida.

BOYS OF NATION OLDER THAN MEN, SAYS DR. HOBEN

Hot Springs, Ark., September 23.—(AP)—Boys are older than men, 1,000 Boy Scout leaders in conference here were told tonight as they finished the second day of the national meeting of executives of the Boy Scouts of America.

Dr. Allen Hoben, president of Kalamazoo (Michigan) College, was the speaker tonight, who in discussing "Biology and Boy Nature," ventured the paradoxial assertion as to the greater age of the boy and explained:

"The adult is more or less accommodated to a recent and artificial civilization; the boy belongs to the elemental past."

Dr. Hoben was followed at the general session by O. H. Benson, director of the Lone Star division of the Boy Scouts. Their addresses closed a strenuous day of conferences which included treatment of sociological questions and debate on outdoor training of young Americans.

Former Marine Smashes Way To Decisive Victory Over Dempsey in Ten-Round Match.

VICTORY DESERVED, ALL EXPERTS SAY

Dethroned Champion Mere Shell of Former Fighting Machine and Barely Escapes Knock-Out.

BY ALAN J. GOULD.

Ringside, Sesqui-Centennial Stadium, Philadelphia, September 23.—(AP)—Gene Tunney, the fighting marine, is the new heavyweight champion of the world. He dethroned Jack Dempsey, king for the last seven years, tonight by smashing his way to decisive victory in a ten-round match that went the limit and furnished one of the greatest upsets in boxing history.

Dempsey, only a shell of his old fighting self, was outboxed and outfought from start to finish, groggy and bleeding in a one-sided battle that was decided in a driving rain before a record crowd of 132,000 spectators.

This great throng, forming a spectacle unprecedented in sports annals, paid close to $2,000,000 to witness a match that fell far from the sensational heights expected of it.

Cheer on Challenger.

Stunned at first by the amazing slowness, the lethargy and lack of old fighting fire in the champion's attack, the dripping throng cheered on the challenger as he steadily hammered and battered his way to triumph, piling up points that gave him an overwhelming margin and earned him the unanimous decision of the judges.

Tunney, reaching the pinnacle of a fighting career that started when he was a buck private in the ranks of the marines, fought a masterful battle, outgeneralling Dempsey at nearly every turn as well as outpunching the champion with convincing ease. The battling product of the sidewalks of New York's Greenwich Village, at the age of 28, fairly won his laurels and cleanly demonstrated his right to the purple robes of pugilism.

But the handsome, rugged challenger dethroned a man who came to the end of the championship trail with few weapons and less stamina to defend his place at the top.

Dempsey Is Favorite.

Dempsey entered the ring a 4-to-1 favorite, backed as heavily as any champion in history. Experts had proclaimed him fit, in spite of his three year lay off, but except for a gallant stand and a few flashes of his old self, he was outclassed.

Dempsey was far from the furious fighter, the "tiger man" who smash-

COURT NATIONS ARE NOT BOUND BY GENEVA PLAN

Delegates Advise Formula of Reply to U. S. Inquiry on Acceptibility of Reservations.

COMMITTEE PLANS SPECIAL PROTOCOL

Would Give Powers Right To Withdraw Approval of Reservations If They Saw Fit Later.

Washington, September 23.—(AP)—American entry into the world court will have to be reconsidered by the senate in the judgment of a number of informed officials in the capital if the member powers adopt the recommendations submitted to them by the Geneva advisory conference on the American reservations.

In the absence of official advices from Geneva any authorized expression of views was lacking but an undercurrent of feeling was discernable that the whole question of America participating in the work of the court had been greatly complicated.

Initiative now rests with the powers participating in the Geneva discussion as the report of the conference, as adopted today, is merely of an advisory character. It recommends to the powers a formula of reply to the inquiry of the Washington government as to whether American signature of the world court protocol on the basis of the reservations attached by the senate would be satisfactory.

Powers Not Committed.

The powers are not committed to accept the advice of Geneva delegates. Each being free to formulate whatever reply to Washington it deems best and the next move expected is the decision of the individual powers on the nature of these replies.

Should the powers accept the advice of the Geneva gathering and transmit identic replies holding that American signature of a supplemental protocol, as well as of the original protocol, was necessary it is said in some quarters that President Coolidge must of necessity submit the new protocol drafted at Geneva to the senate if he believed it desirable that the United States enter the court on that basis.

These observers say he would be without authority to exchange ratifications without further advice and consent of the senate, but whether the administration would take that course or merely drop the whole matter was a question on which no official cared to venture a prediction.

Would Renew Argument.

However, there apparently was no doubt in any quarter that the supplemental protocol, if submitted to the senate, would mark a renewal of the whole argument as to American entry into the court and defer indefinitely, if not prevent completely, American adherence to that judicial body.

In effect such informal expressions

Hurricane in Florida Recalls

CONSTITUTION FILES RECORD STORMS OF HISTORY

Terrible Disasters of Past

BY LOY WARWICK.

It is natural to wonder if there ever was another disaster in this country as horrible as the one that left Florida crippled and suffering.

Written on the yellowed pages of dusty newspaper files is a vivid record of nature's cruel accomplishments with two of her most frequently used and destructive tools—wind and water.

On Monday morning, March 24, 1913, these lines were stretched across the front page of The Constitution:

"One Thousand People Reportd Killed In Omaha By Tornado—The City Is In Flames."

And before the nation had recovered from the shock of these first reports, wires grew hot with messages of a yellow tide that was sweeping over Indiana and Ohio.

"Three thousand may have perished in the deluge which swept the northern half of the Ohio river valley yesterday nd today. . . Probably a half million families were rendered homeless and the number of injured runs into appalling figures."

This came just 48 hours after a tornado swept through Iowa and Nebraska, beginning on an Easter morning and claiming an awful toll before it spent itself.

Fire Adds To Terror.

Property damages in these two disasters, following one upon the other in such rapid succession that the whole nation was paralyzed with horror, ran into the hundreds of millions.

On the second day after first reports of the flood reached Atlanta, the number of dead was given at more than 3,000. Two thousand met death in Dayton alone, these meager dispatches from the devastated area declared. Damage to railroad lines and

Fall Hats

Nothing is more indicative of the passing of summer and the coming of fall than the change in head covering. In just a few days the straws disappear and the felts appear.

You may be trying to get a little more wear out of an old felt, but you will not try it very long, so your attention is dircted to advertisments featuring hats that appear in The Constitution.

There are brand new hats for father, mother, the boys and the girls, and Atlanta's stores have the very latest styles for fall.

Sometimes you can get an idea of what you desire and the price by looking in a show window, but the best way is to read the advertisements in The Constitution.

department of the store for overhead expense instead of charging the amount up on a per cent of sales basis, stating this method has proven the best.

"Increased sales," declared Dr. Haake, "are largely a matter of giving the people what they want, and displaying the goods properly so as to draw attention to their merits." He warned his hearers against trying to sell a customer an article for which the customer has no need. "One loyal customer who has been won by fair treatment and proper courtesy is worth ten sales where a man has been sold something he does not want," he said.

Counseling salesmen to act as the consumer's friend, Dr. Haake urged his hearers to help the customer spend his money wisely, so as to get the goodwill of the people. He dealt with store atmosphere, stating that this is a matter of the personnel more than anything else.

"Selling is personality," he concluded, discussing personality as enthusiasm, sincerity, faith and courage.

Frank Neely, president of the association, presided at the meeting.

Geneva, September 23.—(AP)—A committee report concerning acceptance of American reservations to membership in the world court today was accepted by a delegates conference after which that body adjourned.

As the result of the adoption of the report the United States will be invited to participate in the drawing up of a special protocol which will translate the five American reservations into the language of the court and the covenant of the League of Nations. After adjournment the delegates began signing the final act embodying a draft of the protocol, which will be forwarded to Washington both in behalf of the conference and the individual states involved.

Powers May Withdraw.

The protocol, as finally agreed upon after considerable debate, will give the right to the powers in the court to withdraw their approval of American reservations if they see fit later. These denunciations, however, would be operative only for two of the reservations offered by the United States. These are reservation 4, whereby the statute for the court cannot be amended without the consent of the United States, and reservation 5, whereby the court cannot entertain requests for advisory opinions touching on disputes in which the United States has or claims an interest, without the consent of that country.

In adjourning the conference President Van Eysinga frankly admitted that he did not know what attitude the United States would take. "We have built a bridge," he said, "let us hope that America will cross it. Our constitutional difficulties in drafting this reply certainly have been greater than was dreamed of in the United States when the reservations were formulated. We look to the United States to resume her place in the Pacific settlement of international conflicts."

The powers' replies give the United States satisfaction concerning the reservations on advisory opinions provided the League of Nations council requests these by unanimity, but does not if a majority vote of the council suffers.

MIAMI IS HIDING SCARS OF STORM

crashing houses and the flying missiles of death.

Wonder of It.

Now that the catastrophe is being more calmly calculated the amazing fact is that the loss of life was not even more than the imagination first estimated. The explanation is that the first section of the storm was not the deadly one and served to awaken the sleeping people and urge them to seek whatever protections were accessible. In an open day with most of the citizens abroad at their vocations, the children in the schools, and workmen busy on buildings and in factories, the loss of lives would have been enormously greater than the mortuary registrations now reveal.

The roll of the more or less injured persons is also greatly shorter. The seriously wounded and maimed are remarkably fewer than in the tracks of other hurricanes in the country's history. Most of those the writer saw being treated at emergency stations were superficial bruises, cuts and limb lacerations that should easily heal, through the treatment and advice given. The larger number of the injured got their first aid treatments and went out again to look after their personal affairs. The Red Cross and local forces worked rapidly and efficiently and deserve the most lavish praise for their skilfull and humane conduct.

Ministries Mobilized.

More quickly than I have seen heretofore in any disaster field the official and volunteer ministries were mobilized in Miami. Acting Mayor Gilman and City Manager Wharton fairly leaped into action as the storm left them freedom and the instant measures they inaugurated were inspirations of sagacity and efficiency. They were emphatically providential men for such a day of consternation and calamity. No other men that I know, in civic or army service, could have met the chaotic and exacting emergency with more devotion and generalship.

The national guardsmen, under Colonel Collins, came to service at once by order of Governor Martin, through Adjutant-General Foster. The American Legion rallied to the rescue with the same spirit that sent them over the top in France. The church people assembled their workers and opened early relief stations and the Knights of Columbus were among the first to offer aid, food, shelter and clothing to all who came into their stations.

The national Red Cross sent its most expert directors to Miami and its offer to take over the whole system of relief and rehabilitation was wisely accepted by the city authorities.

Need of the Hour.

The big need of the situation is for ample money to carry on the urgent work of relief and reinstatement. The ready cash is the actual salvation of the hour. With it all the other agencies and accessories can be more easily and cheaply commanded than by waiting on the far away contributions of food, clothing, beddings and other articles of necessity. Every man and woman who feels the Christian urge to help the helpless victims of this brutal mass-blow by nature should put the help in dollars and speed them without an hour's delay, through press and official agencies, to the Red Cross at Miami.

The railroads serving Miami area are doing noble and generous work to minister to relief work in the city and to bring out free of charge all those who are unable to finance their way to their relatives and friends in other states. Train loads of these homeless, impoverished families are leaving on special trains and thus sensibly relieving the demands upon the services and funds of the local relief bodies.

The negro residents were not so hard hit as their white neighbors, but are being equally cared for and given employment to make their conditions easier.

Georgians Seek Relatives.

A number of Georgia men have hurriedly hither to look after their relatives from whom they could get no word, because of suspension of wire service. So far as I can learn they found their people uninjured and safely cared for. Some are taking their kinsmen back with them. Others are happily returning with news that all is well with the loved ones.

The telegraph offices are jammed day and night with those sending or seeking messages and the offices are working their forces almost cruelly to accommodate those whose anxieties are pathetic and in some cases almost frantic.

Paladins of the Press.

In this calamity the heart of the nation would have beaten less panicky if the press of Miami could have functioned anyway near normalcy. But wires were down, lights out and power off—none of the agencies for getting and spreading news at hand. In fact, except for the Daily Herald establishment, the press was paralyzed and even it marooned in the Miami area.

But Mitchell, of the Associated Press, and Reese Amis, of the Daily News, displayed the daring of the profession by bucking the effects of the storm and forging over a 60-mile-long cheval de frise to reach West Palm Beach and tell the world what had overwhelmed Miami.

Men like Frank Shutts and Frank Stoneman, of the Herald, Morton M. Milford and Amis, of the News, Frank Fildes and T. M. Arnold, of the Tribune are journalists too alert and experienced to be easily scotched, but a devil-ridden hurricane is something not scheduled in the agenda of the profession. But now that power is again in their service they can be depended upon to do their wholehearted best to put intelligence, vim and vigor into the hearts of Miamians and speed the wheels that will make the Magic City more magical and magnificent than ever she dreamed to be.

as could be obtained indicate the belief that regardless of the merits of the questions raised at Geneva as to the American reservations, the formula of reply to the United States adopted by the conference of delegates and recommended to the powers could be expected only to impede, not to expedite, American adherence.

In this connection Senator Moses, of New Hampshire, a republican member of the senate foreign relations committee, asserted after a visit to the white house that there was little likelihood of he fifth American reservation being changed.

The senator said this reservation was drawn by John Bassett Moore, American jurist on the world court and presented to the senate by Senators Swanson of Virginia and Walsh of Montana, democrats, and predicted the reservation is not going to "suffer from much changing."

lied to my support," he told friends. "I can't use words that well. But I can prove my thanks by service and I pledge the people the best I have in me.

"I always tried to bring harmony among those who were doing the fighting, and that is how I expect to run my office. I intend to appoint on committees the men who are best qualified by experience to serve. I can not make Atlanta a great city by myself, but I can get the help of men who will make anything we undertake possible."

Mr. Ragsdale came to Atlanta from Dallas, Ga., more than 40 years ago. Since that time he has been active in political and civic life of Atlanta and Fulton county. He was formerly mayor of Oakland City and when that section was made a part of Atlanta, he was elected alderman from that ward.

He extended his congratulations to Mr. Ragsdale and wished for him a successful administration. Mr. Gordon said that he plans an extended trip to Europe.

Roy D. Warren, candidate for the board of education from the tenth ward, in a run-over with C. J. McLendon, extended his thanks for the support of friends in the election.

SOLDIERS ORDER MOORE HAVEN EXODUS

to 35,000,000, estimated by J. W. Young, developer of Hollywood.

Fort Lauderdale $25,000,000 to 35,000,000, estimated by city officials.

Searchers and divers still were at work in Biscayne bay and at Moore Haven, and it was expected that when their work was finished there would be large accretions to the death list. Colonel Lowry estimated that there were at least 200 more dead at Moore Haven with the possibility that some of the bodies would not be recovered until the flood waters had receded a week or more hence.

Here at Miami searching parties found seven more bodies and the death list was increased by two more with the deaths at Coral Gables of a small girl and a man who had been injured.

Body Unidentified.

An unidentified man's body was recovered from the sunken schooner Evelyn D, which foundered in the harbor with a liquor cargo valued at $70,000.

Divers were sent into the Nohab, formerly the private yacht of the German kaiserine, which ended its existence as a supper club anchored in Biscayne bay. The captain and six of the crew of this craft are missing.

Eleven persons, seven of them children, were rescued today from a caved-in apartment house, where they had lain in darkness since last Saturday night. None was injured, but their plight was described as pitiable. They were removed to emergency hospitals.

Fears that the Seminole Indians, gathered in two camps in the Everglades, had suffered heavy casualties in the hurricane, proved groundless today as newspaper men searched out their camps. They moved out from their usual habitation in time, but suffered some from lack of food.

As the work of rehabilitation went forward here and in the other coast towns and resorts, American Red Cross and other officials centered attention on sanitary conditions in an effort to prevent outbreaks of disease. As yet no case of typhoid has been reported, but medical men were agreed that conditions were such that an extensive outbreak was possible.

Doctors, sanitation experts and nurses sent in from as far off as Chicago, found their staunchest ally in a blazing semi-tropical sun which has glared from virtually cloudless skies ever since the storm passed.

Serums Are Rushed.

Serums still are being rushed here from many points and inoculation against typhoid and tetanus is proceeding as rapidly as possible. A flotilla of destroyers came in from Charleston with fresh serum and a representative from the Nashville, Tenn. Banner arrived by airplane with a cargo of medical supplies and an offer from J. G. Stahlman, managing editor, of as much more as might be requested.

Negro men were conscripted today for cleaning up the city outside the business district, where many streets still are blocked by tangled wreckage. In addition volunteer workers were called for.

Rumors of more storms to come continued in circulation. Charles Haines, middle-aged, helped them along and was sentenced to 90 days at hard labor after he had rushed into several hotel lobbies shouting that another hurricane was approaching. Several women fainted when they heard his prophecies.

Yamacraw Arrives.

The coast guard cutter Yamacraw arrived here today with nine injured sailors which she took off the sailless four-masted schooner Lydia M. Baxter, of New York, 26 miles northeast of Miami. She left a week's food supply with the other members and is to return later to tow the craft to port. Soon after her arrival the cutter was sent in search of the schooner Lake Charles, which with her crew of 33, has not been heard from since the hurricane struck the Florida coast.

While here the Yamacraw received a radio from the naval tug Saukee that Bimini, in the nearby Bahamas, lost seven killed and six injured in the storm. The Saukee was ordered to Bimini to lend whatever assistance possible.

Direct word received here from Pensacola, another of the Florida cities lashed by the hurricane, was that the damage there was greater than at first estimated, that to shipping alone probably running to $5,000,000. Further surveys showed, however, that there had been no fatalities and no serious injury to persons.

STATE HEADQUARTERS WILL MOVE.

Jacksonville, Fla., September 23.—(AP)—State headquarters for relief operations in the disaster zone will be moved from Jacksonville to West Palm Beach within a day or two, in order that supervisory activities may be carried on as expeditiously as possible, it was stated today by James L. Feiser, vice chairman of the National Red Cross, in charge of the headquarters here.

Trained relief workers are arriving here from various points and are being routed to places in the stricken area where they are most needed, Mr. Feiser said.

Earl Kilpatrick, assistant manager of the Red Cross middle western district, who worked in the relief of sufferers from the Pueblo flood, Oregon fires and the midwest tornado of 1925, has gone to Miami, the temporary distribution center for the east coast.

Henry Green, Red Cross director at Fort Benning, Ga., was to report to James A. Hendrix, in charge of the Sebring section.

HURRICANE RECALLS DISASTERS OF PAST

property reached more than $25,000,000. They were the chief property losers.

"An additional horror was reported in Dayton. Fire there, which seemed widespread and probably uncontrollable in view of the paralyzation of the water plant, brought horrible deaths to many who sought to escape drowning by climbing to upper floors of buildings.

"Flames that destroyed eight buildings in Dayton's submerged business section," said the dispatches on the third day of the flood, "tonight cast a red, weird glow over the flood-stricken city, that added to the fear of thousands of refugees and marooned persons and lead to apprehension that there were many of the water's prisoners in the burned buildings."

People Trapped By Flood.

"Estimates are that 70,000 persons are marooned in Dayton's flooded district, where 15,000 homes are submerged beneath the yellow tide."

On March 28 came the encouraging report that the flood was receding and that a revised estimate gives the loss of life as not to exceed 2,000—"and may go below that figure."

These same reports declared that 120 miles of streets in Dayton had been inundated; that 500 horses had been drowned and more than 1,000 automobiles destroyed.

"The floods in Ohio and Indiana not only swept away thousands of homes but made escape impossible for terrorized people by destroying all railroad lines. With principal avenues of escape thus cut off, thousands of marooned victims face starvation and pestilence."

In a book prepared by Thomas H. Russell on the Omaha tornado and the Ohio-Nebraska flood, which was brought into this department by a reader, the final toll of the sweeping tide was four lives under an even 500, of which 437 were claimed in Ohio alone. No less than 70,000 people were rendered homeless, says this book, and the property loss was officially estimated at around $300,000,000.

The Easter day tornado claimed almost 200 lives, according to a conservative report, 133 of which were reported in Omaha and environs. Six hundred and forty-two homes were destroyed and 1,666 homes were wrecked in Omaha. Six thousand men, women and children were left homeless in the Nebraska city, Mr. Russell's figures say.

Damage Runs to Millions.

A total of $7,062,250 in property damage and loss was officially reported.

Then, these two disasters, both coming within a few short and terrible hours, took a toll of approximately 700 lives, at a conservative estimate, along with hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of property. Thousands were injured and crippled. Hundreds suffered from exposure and disease.

While the Omaha twister was going about its devastating work, there were several other less serious devil clouds sweeping all up and down the Missouri and Platte river valleys.

The horrors of the Indiana-Ohio flood storm are graphically told:

"Half the houses on the west side (Columbus) have toppled over and have been carried away completely. Nearly all of these contained people who tried to swim to other houses. It must be that they could not swim and that many who could swim were swept under by the current. One could only get an idea of the strength of that raging flood when the great bridges, weighing hundreds of tons, floated down streams hundreds of feet before sinking out of sight. Imagine trying to swim—imagine trying to row a park skiff in that tide.

Johnstown Flood.

"It was on Thursday that the boats began to pick up bodies. Boats which had carried these same people on pleasure jaunts last summer had been turned into funeral craft. A head which had lain on soft cushions and looked up into some loved one's face, now lay stark and staring, uncushioned, bound for the undertaker. Ghastly work for picnic boats"—

Not so many years before Johnstown, Pa., was the scene of one of the greatest catastrophes in history. A reservoir burst on May 31, 1889, and the city was washed under a mountainous flood, which descended through a narrow valley and destroyed everything in its path. Between 2,500 and 3,000 met death.

These cities and their people, suffering greater disaster than Florida, have recovered.

There is no need to worry about what is going to happen to Florida. Even now her flowers are blooming out of a wreckage that will soon be cleared, to be supplanted by new structures and new faith.

T. C. Smith Throws Support to Warren In Run-Over Election

T. C. Smith, defeated candidate for board of education from the tenth ward, Thursday night issued a statement throwing his strength to Roy D. Warren, who will enter a run-over race with C. J. McLendon for the post.

"I thank my friends and supporters in the tenth ward for their vote for me," Mr. Smith declared. "Mr. Warren and I ran on practically the same platform and principles, and as he led by a large number of votes, I feel he is the choice of the majority of people in the tenth ward. I trust that those who supported me will vote for Mr. Warren."

RETAIL DRUGGISTS WILL CELEBRATE PHARMACY WEEK

The Atlanta Retail Druggists' association, composed of 80 drug stores of Atlanta, affiliated with the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association, will participate in the celebration of national pharmacy week, October 10-16.

National pharmacy week was established only a year ago, with the idea in view of teaching the American public that the druggist is a professional man, trained to serve the public in a special capacity, and that pharmacy is an institution safeguarding the health of the nation. It was at the 1924 meeting of the American Pharmaceutical association that a national pharmacy week was suggested, and this idea developed to the extent that the first national pharmacy week was staged in 1925. So great was the success of the first attempt along this line that it was decided to make national pharmacy week an annual event.

Road Mileage Allotted In Twenty Anti-Holder Counties, Says Carswell

Hardman Will Carry More Than 100 Counties, George Carswell Tells South Georgians.

Alma, Ga., September 23.—(Special.)—Chairman John N. Holder, of the state highway commission, recently ordered the chief engineer of the department to add 20 new counties to the list for road fund allotments, according to George H. Carswell, who delivered his second speech of the run-over campaign in behalf of Dr. L. G. Hardman in the Bacon county courthouse this afternoon. Mr. Carswell charged that Holder added these counties to the list so he could use this additional mileage to buy the support of some of the counties which voted against him in the first primary.

Carswell charged that Holder bought the support of some Chatham county authorities with a $750,000-appropriation for the Coastal highway.

Carswell denounced the present system of building highways as conducted by Holder and said under this system the small counties of Georgia will never get any paved highways. "Holder's miserable mismanagement of the highway department speaks his unfitness for governor all over Georgia," he said. "I don't know what your county has got, but all we've got in my county is a mule, a truck, and a project," the speaker declared. Carswell said he is supporting Hardman simply because the election of Hardman is the only way "the damnable Holder machine can be smashed forever."

Carswell was given a cordial reception by a crowd of Bacon county citizens who waited patiently for more than an hour for the grand jury to finish its work so that the courthouse auditorium could be used for the speech.

Holder's campaign methods were denounced by Carswell. "John Holder is going over the state saying Dr. Hardman took the last blanket from a widow on a debt," he said. "John Holder is simply using this blanket to cover up his own glaring failure as a public officer."

Carswell called on the people to "wake up" and finish the job of breaking up the political machine which he said had kept Holder in office as "Georgia's master." "We are going to make Dr. Hardman the next governor and when we have done this we will have done something big for our state," he concluded.

STATE AROUSED, SAYS CARSWELL.

Baxley, Ga., September 23.—(Special.)—Georgia has come to the parting of the ways and the people of this state are aroused against the corruption of machine politics to such a white heat that they will arise in every part of the state on October 6 and will give John N. Holder, candidate for governor, one of the worst defeats ever seen in the history of the state, according to George H. Carswell in a speech in the Appling county courthouse today.

Speaking in behalf of Dr. L. G. Hardman, the Holder opponent, Mr. Carswell denounced in scathing words the campaign methods used by Holder and charged that Holder is using the state's road mileage money to buy the support of counties which voted against him in the first primary. He predicted that Holder would not carry 28 counties in the second primary, declaring that the people of Georgia are at last awake to the disasters ahead if the Holder "machine rule" is continued.

The speaker was introduced by Judge H. J. Lawrence, former judge of city court of Baxley. Judge Lawrence said Mr. Carswell needed no introduction as he had taught school at Baxley and had spent most of his youth in this county.

Makes First Speech.

Carswell said he was making his first appearance as a speaker in behalf of the man who had just defeated him for governor. "But I entered this race not because I wanted to be governor, but to try to smash the greatest political machine ever created in Georgia," he said. "To prevent this machine from blocking and throttling this state I entered the fight for the people of this state. Were I not to continue this fight in support of Dr. Hardman, who is fighting this machine, I would be a political and moral coward."

The speaker reviewed the history of the highway department and said the outcome of this battle centers around this department. He declared Dr. Hardman had not an office in the state from chief justice down that he would accept and denied that he had entered into any trade with Dr. Hardman.

"I simply asked Dr. Hardman if he would continue to wage a fight to free the people of Georgia from machine rule and I told him if he would give me this promise I would take the stump in his behalf."

Carswell charged that Holder was given authority to direct affairs of the highway department in a bill which was passed after midnight at the last session of the legislature in 1923 and that not a member of the legislature in either house knew anything about it.

"I want to know why John Holder called on the treasurer of the highway department on the night that bill passed to bring $500 of the state's money to the capitol after midnight. I want John Holder to tell what he did with $400 brought to the capitol on August 6, 1923; $600 on August 8 and $1,500 on August 15, brought for what he called legislative purposes. John Holder hasn't got the manhood to say that this statement is not true."

Repeats Charge.

The speaker reiterated his charge that Holder has but 49 1-2 miles of roads to allot, but held public meetings all over the state which cost the people of the state $1,000,000, to create the impression that he had 800 miles and to lay the foundation for Holder's campaign for governor.

"Holder's machine is four times as dangerous as the J. J. Brown machine," Carswell said. "Out of every gallon of gasoline sold, the people pay 2 cents to John Holder's damnable machine. While J. J. Brown only got one-half cent, Brown has fewer than 500 employees, while Holder has 5,000 on his pay roll."

Carswell charged that Holder on Monday, although supposed to be on leave of absence, ordered the highway department to put 20 new counties on the list for additional mileage, he then fixed October 10 as the day to let these contracts, Carswell said. "That day is two days after the election. He is simply trying to buy these counties for his governor's race and to pay them with the money belonging to the people of Georgia." Carswell charged that Holder has scratched off the list for county allotments some of the counties which voted against him in the first primary. He charged that Sam Slate, state auditor, was supporting Holder and does not care to make an audit of the state highway department. Slate has not scratched a pen about the department since 1924, he said.

Discussing the bond issue, Carswell said the governor has nothing to do with a bond issue.

Carswell said Holder would be the worst-defeated candidate for governor who ever entered a run-over race. "The Atlanta Journal before the election said Holder would carry 148 counties. He only carried 68 counties, and in this run-over he will not carry 28 counties."

Charges Villification.

Carswell charged that Holder is now conducting a campaign of villification. "Holder is now going around this state trying to say that D. Hardman took a blanket from a poor widow, and all that kind of bunk. He said such a course is beneath the dignity of a candidate for governor, and friend and foe know the private and public record of Dr. Hardman disproves such ridiculous and unfair statements.'

Carswell charged that Holder headquarters in Atlanta swarms with politicians seeking to raid the state's funds.

"Among those sitting right now in Holder's Kimball house headquarters is Fred Bridges, working on Holder's 'blind pay roll,'" he said. "Bridges is the arch traitor whose activities under J. J. Brown did more than anything else to wreck that nefarious machine."

Carswell charged that less than 25 per cent of the money turned over to the highway department by the state ever goes to roads. He said Holder had never accounted for millions of dollars' worth of roadbuilding machinery turned over to him by the federal government.

He denounced the policy of "peanut politicians," which he said is blasting the future progrss of this state. "The time has come for the people of Georgia to wake up," he said, and the crowd cheered loudly.

Patronage Charged.

Carswell charged that Holder uses patronage of the department to control votes of the legislature. He cited cases of Fermor Barrett, representative from Stephens county, and W. R. Jones, of Meriwether. He said both these men wrote letters supporting Holder, and that both had sons who were appointed engineers by Holder at salaries of $300 a month each. He declared a law should be written providing that the state's money should not be used to "tie and bind and tetter the members of the legislature." "As long as machine politicians can stand at the door of the legislature and say yea and nay about legislation, thus the money of the people will continue to be wasted," he said.

Carswell concluded by saying he was making this fight, not for Hardman, not against Holder, but for the best interests of the entire people of Georgia.

"The happiest day of my life will be October 6, when the flood of ballots spell the doom of machine politics and rings out to the world the news that Georgia people have arisen as one man and have repudiated forever these men who have set themselves up as Georgia's political masters," Mr. Carswell concluded.

WOMAN FINDS BEAN RESEMBLING PARROT

Most butter beans are alike unto one another like "two peas in a pod," but one uncovered Thursday by Mrs. R. J. Marshall, of 406 Cherokee street, in shelling a quantity of beans purchased from a huckster, is so unlike its brothers as to be a real curosity.

Bearing a perfect resemblance to the head of a parrot, the butter bean in question has even a tiny white projection for a beak, while the green coloring carries out the suggestion of a parrot's head.

DECISION IS DELAYED ON RAILWAY PETITION

The Georgia public service commission announced tonight, following the hearing of the petition of receivers of the Macon and Birmingham railroad to abandon the road, that it would attempt to reach a decision at an executive session of the commission next Tuesday morning.

The decision of the public service commission will be in the form of a recommendation to the interstate commerce commission, which has the final authority in the matter, it was said.

Vigorous protest against the abandonment of the railroad, which extends from Macon to LaGrange, Ga., a distance of 96 miles, and which has been out of operation for the last four years, was registered at the hearing by citizens residing at various points on the railroad. This came following the testimony of representatives of the receivers, in which it was shown that the railroad has been in the hands of receivers since 1908, and that during that time it was practically impossible to operate the railroad at a profit.

In closing the hearing, Senator Joke Smith, of Atlanta, who had volunteered his services as attorney for the protestants of the petition, urged the commissioners to postpone their decision, stating that within a period of six months the resumption of operations on the Macon and Birmingham railroad could be brought about. He stressed the need of the railroad through calling attention to the petitions of protest which were received during the day from farmers, fruit growers, manufacturers and others including the Macon Chamber of Commerce and the LaGrange Chamber of Commerce.

Will Summers, of Gainesville, Ga., told the commissioners of his making an offer of $100,000 to purchase the railroad early last spring, and of its refusal, and R. L. Render, president of the Bank of LaGrange, stated that he had offered the receivers $125,000 for the road but recently, and that his offer also was refused. Others testified during the afternoon's session to the need of the railroad.

Colonial Dame Candy Company Will Open for Business Today

Noon today will witness the opening of the first of a new group of chain candy stores, maintained by an Atlanta manufacturer, the Colonial Dame Candy company. The store, which will be formally opened at 12 o'clock by Mayor Walter A. Sims, is at 189 Peachtree street, opposite the new Macy building.

An attractive feature of the opening to which the general public has been cordially invited, will be the presentation of a generous sample box of candy to each visitor. Colonial Dame candies are the old-fashioned kind, made by hand methods in the company's factory at 58 Harris street, N. E.

"This old fashioned type of candy is something new in Atlanta," Edward L. Staudermann, president, said, "and we feel confident that Atlanta folks will find it delightful as well as different."

The Colonial Dame candy store is decorated in the old colonial style, with Windsor chairs, spinet desk, colonial mirrors and other old fashioned fitting. Salesgirls will be dressed in costumes to harmonize with the general atmosphere of the store.

Charles E. Krafft, formerly manager of the Holland Maid Candy company of Baltimore, is general manager of the new company, in which many Atlantans are stockholders.

FORMER STUDENT AT GEORGIA TECH DIES IN FLORIDA

Frank Clementine McKenzie, son of R. E. McKenzie, of Rome, and a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Ellison, of 650 Highland avenue, was killed during the Miami hurricane, according to advices received in Atlanta. The body was washed up on Miami Beach Monday, relatives were advised.

Mr. McKenzie was a graduate of Georgia School of Technology, and at one time was an employee of The Constitution, leaving to enter the real estate field in Florida. Serving in the world war, he was badly wounded and never entirely recovered from his injury. He was a second lieutenant.

While attending Chattanooga university, he played center on the football team, and took a great interest in college activities. He married Miss Lallia Beal Keese, sister of Alex Keese, former director of the Howard orchestra, and in addition to his wife, is survived by his father, two brothers, R. E. McKenzie, Jr., and Roy McKenzie, of Rome; two sisters, Mrs. W. A. Dobson, of Atlanta, and Miss Marguerite McKenzie, of Rome.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later. His father, who is a conductor on the Southern railway, has left for Miami to arrange for the body to be brought back to Georgia.

PAINE LIBRARY BODY REPORTS ON DRIVE

In a speech at a meeting Thursday of the Paine College committee, Chairman J. Lawrence McCord said: "The need of equipments at Paine college makes an imperative call upon us to meet that need at this time. From its origin, Paine college has been giving Georgia good colored citizens. To continue this service it must be equipped with an adequate library. That it should bear the name of Dr. George Williams Walker, its first president is the beautiful sentiment of the alumni, a suggestion that is a credit to their hearts—which appeals to every one. Atlanta is asked to contribute $25,000 of the total of $75,000. This committee is glad to bring this request to the 'Gate City of the South.'"

Others who spoke were: J. E. McJenkins, of Park Street church; W. H. Coppedge, St. Paul; J. W. Clayton, of the First church; Dr. Elam F. Dempsey, conference secretary of education. T. J. Dempsey, Sr., was an invited guest of the committee. In addition to these the Revs. J. A. Martin and C. C. Neal, both graduates of Paine college, were introduced, and spoke to the committee. The members of the committee are: J. L. McCord, chairman, J. A. Manget, J. D. Manget, S. F. Boykins, W. H. Preston, J. N. Clayton, Asa G. Candler, Jr., G. E. Knott, J. E. McJenkins, W. H. Coppedge, R. B. Eleazer.

For the continuance of the campaign in Atlanta meetings will be held at Wesleyan Memorial church at 4 o'clock each Thursday. Chairman McCord announces that the committee of "One Hundred" will meet as above stated, Thursday at 4 o'clock, September 30. This committee is the result of the unanimous action of the Methodist ministers in their meeting at Wesleyan Memorial church Monday morning of this week.

Years of Suffering May Come to Her
. . . through neglected feet

Cantilever Shoe

HER mother and father would do anything in the world for her. Years of foot suffering can be forestalled now if they weigh the importance of the kind of shoes she is to wear.

Nature designed her feet to be strong, resilient and unblemished. Each foot is composed of 26 small bones arranged in the form of flexible arches, to serve as springs or shock absorbers. Muscles and tendons hold these bones in place.

Every girl would grow up with strong arches and straight toes if her parents consistently bought for her the Cantilever Shoe, which is shaped like the normal child's foot. The Cantilever has room for the toes, and a flexible arch permitting constant exercise of the foot muscles.

The Cantilever fits in the arch and the heel, keeps the growing foot in correct shape and will safeguard your children against foot weaknesses which otherwise might come to them.

Cantilever Shoes for Misses and Children are good looking, well made and priced reasonably.

MAIL BRINGS FLOOD OF STORM STORIES

Letters telling of horrible scenes in Miami during and just after the West Indian hurricane hit the Florida town last Friday night and Saturday morning, continue to pour into Atlanta and each mail brings hundreds of new stories.

Among the letters received Thursday was one from Cobb Torrance, former Atlantan. He stated that he and a roommate, Shelby Langston, formerly of Monroe, Ga., were fortunate to be alive after the storm had passed. He told of seeing the front door blown from his home into the street and of the entire roof being blown away.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Popham and Miss Delphine Popham arrived in Atlanta late Wednesday afternoon and told of the storm. A part of their experiences follow:

"Our house is protected by a double seawall, and that must have been what saved us. There are about eighteen houses on the island, and none of them were destroyed.

"We were carried to Miami Monday afternoon on a Red Cross car and caught a train for home. Father stayed there to help out with the relief work.

"We thought it remarkable that our house stood up under the direct blows of the wind. It had a steel frame that went so far into the ground that I guess the island would have gone over if it had."

Miss Popham said the spirit of humanity which dominated Miami was wonderful, and that the people were plunging into relief work without wasting time to wail over their losses.

Prayers Were Answered.

Miss Mamie Joseph, of 1079 St. Louis place, and a former teacher in the Moore Haven school, told Thursday in detail of having been imprisoned with 22 others for two days and nights in an almost completely demolished structure that had blown 300 feet and lodged on the tops of two automobiles which were surrounded by water 18 feet deep.

"We had all given up hope of ever coming out alive, in fact before it was all over we almost wanted to die. I honestly believe that the prayers we sent up were answered," she said.

"It all began so suddenly that we did not realize how bad it was going to be until the dam broke. You see every year Moore Haven has a flood. The town site was completely under water until they raised it and made a little city out of it. The ground is real soft, and is known as 'muck.'

"About 11 o'clock Friday night the wind started blowing and with three friends I went in an automobile to Clewiston, a little town about 16 miles from Moore Haven, to see if the storm was going to amount to much. They told us there to turn around and come back—that it looked like the worst one that had hit that section in some time. On the way back the wind became stronger, but the rain did not start until Saturday morning about 7.30 o'clock.

Storm Warning Comes.

"About 1 o'clock Saturday morning the warning came and just after that the dam broke. We were staying in the Mayflower Inn, a two-story wooden building, and after the dam had broken and the fury of the storm was at its height, the building was blown 300 feet, and if it had not been for two automobiles on which it lodged, I suppose we would have been killed outright.

"The building was 'L' shaped, and after it was blown around the wing was torn away. Of the twenty steps leading upstairs, only four of them were visible then. We had carried everything we could upstairs, including an oil stove, but with 25 people packed up there we couldn't get much in.

"The water looked like it was going down a little about midnight Saturday night. All along you could see people hanging to trees, or rafts or anything that would keep them above the water. They brought in people and some of them had a spark of life in them, but we didn't have whisky or anything to revive them. The only thing we had all during this time was dry shredded wheat. We didn't even have drinking water.

"We did manage to get a sack of flour that wasn't altogether ruined. But imagine flour with nothing to go with it. We fried it, anyway, on the oil stove, which we replenished with oil from a can that we found floating down the river—for it was a real river then. Our only means of light was a dim flame we got by fastening a string across a cup that had bacon grease in it. We first saturated the string in the grease—for you know grease will burn just like wax.

"The wind changed about midnight Saturday and it started raining harder, and a sea captain that was among us said that was a good sign. Sunday, when the storm had died down a little, Dr. Mitchell, of Sebring, a little town not far from Moore Haven, came by in a bateau and took the names and addresses of persons to whom we wanted to send telegrams. Of course there were no stations anywhere around there from which to send wires, but they carried them some place and got them through.

Rescued by Boat.

"Finally about midday Sunday a motor boat pulling a bateau came and they said we had better leave, because it looked like another storm coming. Don't think that we needed any urging. Before I would have gone through that again I would have killed myself. However, there were a few persons who would not leave because they said that all they had was right there, and if they couldn't take it they wouldn't go. You see, we didn't have room in the boats to carry baggage.

"We had to climb out of the back stairs, which were just hanging like a stepladder. The boats were not close to the building, and when you stepped into the water you had no idea whether or not it was over your head. When the water came as high as my waist and still I had not touched bottom I just knew that right then I was going to my rest—but, a second later, when I touched the ground—well, it was the most heavenly feeling I have ever had.

"We finally got to Sebring after many difficulties and after staying there all day Monday—for I was too weak to start home—I caught a train at noon Tuesday for Jacksonville, and from there I came on to my mother's Mrs. M. F. Joseph."

Sedan Blown Into Store.

James H. Daniel, formerly of Atlanta, told of his experience just after the storm while he was on patrol duty with the Red Cross helping find the injured and dead on North Key West.

Harry R. Cohn, a traveling salesman en route to Philadelphia stopped over in Atlanta Thursday afternoon long enough to give a short description of the devastated area in Florida.

He was at the El Commodor hotel and was awakened by a broken window striking him in the side. He thought at first that his hip was broken but managed to get up and take refuge on the first floor of the building where he remained until the first hull came early Saturday morning. He told of seeing a large sedan blown from the street into the center of a large department store, and of seeing a house turned upside down.

TECH GRADUATE IS APPOINTED TO WEST POINT

James K. Wilson, Jr., Tech High graduate and son of Warrant Officer James K. Wilson, 51-B Camp Jesup, Fort McPherson, has been appointed to the United States Military academy, at West Point, by William Chester Langford, of the eleventh congressional district of Georgia, it was announced Thursday by army officials here. He will become a member of the freshman class at the academy and will leave the city within the next few days to take up his studies.

ATLANTA GETS BIG NEW FACTORY

Announcement was made Thursday by Fred T. Newell, secretary of the industrial bureau of the chamber of commerce, of the decision of the Phenix Cheese corporation of New York city to locate a factory in Atlanta.

The industrial department of the Atlanta & West Point railroad was instrumental in the determination of this company's locating in Atlanta and the Burdette Realty company handled the lease, Mr. Newell said.

"One of the most heartening recent developments in the southward movement of industries, is a decision of the executives of the Phenix Cheese corporation, one of America's largest producers of cheese, to establish southern headquarters in Atlanta. This company is opening a large manufacturing and storage plant in Atlanta at the site of the Hanson automobile factory, located on the main belt line of the Atlanta & West Point railroad.

"From this plant is to be served the entire southeastern territory, including Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama and Florida.

"The establishment of this plant means the opening of a market for the dairy products of Georgia farms. While the executive management of the Phenix Cheese corporation, through Erwin S. Martin, vice president, makes it clear that they will not be in the purchasing market on a large scale, it is equally certain that, with the development of the company's plans in this territory, will come an increased demand for the various grades and derivities of milk," Mr. Newell pointed out.

"We have come to Atlanta to establish our new distributing plant," Mr. Martin explained, "because this seems to us the logical distributing point for the southeast, and the further fact that Georgia is rapidly becoming a splendid dairying section. Our company operates upon conservative principles and we are anxious not to have the belief go abroad that an immediate new large market for milk has been established in Atlanta. That is not true at the moment. However, we are hopeful of receiving such encouragement in the establishment of this southern plant that we will feel justified in extending manufacturing operations to the point where we will supplement the present milk market."

HORRORS OF STORM VIVIDLY WRITTEN BY EX-ATLANTAN

Vivid scenes of the devastated Florida areas were described in letters from Mrs. Leon H. O'Quinn, wife of a Hialeah physician, and formerly secretary of the Wesley Memorial hospital here, to Atlanta friends.

Dr. O'Quinn was away on emergency cases, and Mrs. O'Quinn was at home alone when the hurricane struck Hialeah, she wrote. "One side of my house was blown away," she wrote, "then the roof caved in, and I got out and crawled three blocks in the pitch black night to a barn, where I remained soaked and wet until morning."

Mrs. O'Quinn told of meeting her husband, whom she thought she had seen for the last time when they parted Friday, and of accompanying him to a church which was improvized for use as a hospital, where she helped give first aid.

TORNADO RELIEF FUND INCREASES

Additional subscriptions to Atlanta's relief fund for storm-stricken Florida continued to pour into The Constitution Thursday, among the largest contributions being $100 each from the Model laundry, the Atlanta Brush company and the McNeel Marble company.

The total of the local fund now is nearing the $40,000 mark, and Robert S. Parker, chairman of the Atlanta chapter of the Red Cross, stated that every penny that can be spared is sorely needed by the sufferers in the hurricane which cut a swath of ruin across Florida.

GEORGIA TO SEND TYPHOID SERUM TO STORM AREA

With the possibility of fever menace in Florida as a result of the recent disaster, the Florida health department wired Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, Georgia state commissioner of health, for a quantity of typhoid serum.

A large quantity of the serum was shipped to Florida early Thursday morning by a special agent of the Southern railroad.

N. M. Janett, connected with the state health department, left Thursday for Pensacola, Fla., following the request for a sanitary engineer from Georgia.

It was announced from the state capitol that Georgia has an ample supply of the typhoid serum on hand in its laboratories to meet the demands of both Georgia and Florida.

Hardman Employees Refute Charges by John Holder About Working Conditions

More Than 100 Workers Praise Dr. Hardman and Say He Is 'Much Appreciated Friend.'

Alex S. Chamlee, of the Hardman headquarters here, made public Thursday the following statement by 111 employees of the Harmony Grove mills. In doing so he declared that "this is a complete and irrefutable answer to the vicious and slanderous charges made by John N. Holder in his Covington address.

The statement speaks in glowing terms of the affection of employees for Dr. Hardman and is signed by 111 employees, ranging in periods of service from 31 years down.

Thirteen signers of the statement have worked for over 25 years for Dr. Hardman, while more than 50 of those who signed the statement have worked for longer periods than ten years.

Complete Statement.

The statement, in full, follows:

"We, the employees of the Harmony Grove mills voluntarily make the following statements:

"We think we get average wages with living expenses considered. We are satisfied with our work. Some of us have lived here from 20 to 30 years. There is a feeling of harmony between mill authorities and mill operatives. We pull together for the interest of both. We have no labor shortage or labor troubles. We always have plenty of help. All of our overseers have started at the bottom and worked up.

"Some of us own our homes, which we have bought out of our wages received from the Harmony Grove mills. Some of us have bank accounts and some own automobiles, difftrent models and different kinds, and some own the same make of car that Dr. L. G. Hardman, the president of the mill, owns.

"We have two nice churches in our village and have a fine preacher who lives here, devoting all his time to our church. The company gives him a home to live in and pays one-half of his salary. Our B. Y. P. U. at Madison Street church holds the following banners: Senior and junior efficiency banners of the northeast regional convention; senior efficiency banner of the Sarepta association; senior and junior efficiency banners of district No. 1 and the attendance banner of district No. 1.

"Our children attend the public schools of the city. Some of them are preparing to go to college and some are now attending college.

"Our cottages have lights and water which are furnished us free by the company. Our mill is fitted with lights and sewerage.

"The mill authorities stand for cleanliness and morality. Whisky drinking is prohibited.

"Last, but not least, we shall always be satisfied with our work, so long as we have the highly-esteemed gentleman and much-appreciated friend, Dr. L. G. Hardman, as our president.

The petition was signed by 111 employees of the mills.

Reassuring.

"Your former parlor maid has come to us, dear. But don't be alarmed—we don't believe half what she says about you.—Sydney Bulletin.

ANOTHER CHANCE FOR BEAUTY IN THE HOME

New "Handcraft Designs" in tile inlaids are quite the prettiest thing yet shown in a modern linoleum floor

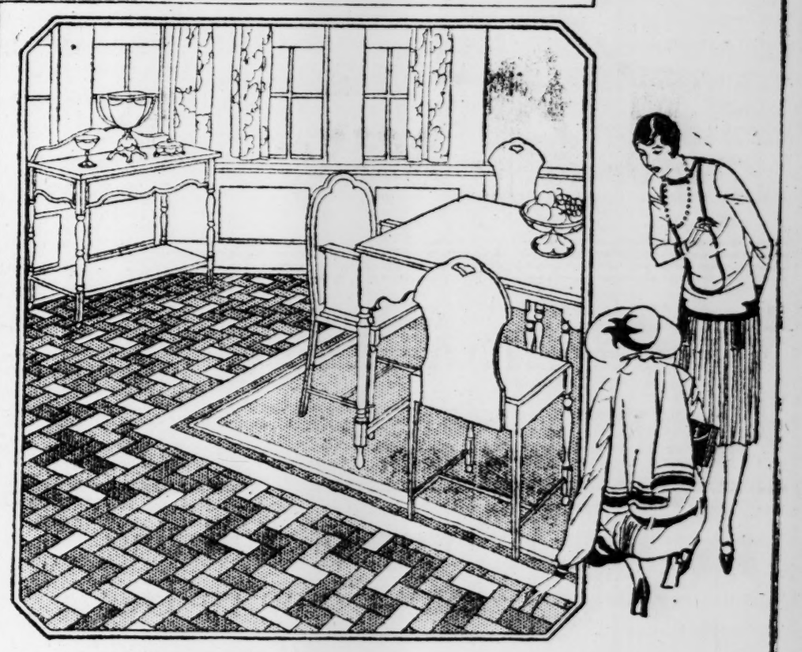

For years women have admired the rich coloring of marble floors, but balked at their cold, hard, unyielding surface. Now local stores are displaying a floor that combines all the beauty of a hand-set tile floor in a comfortable, warm, linoleum floor.

The colors are not only pleasingly combined, but even the semblance of oven-baking has been delightfully captured in tones and shades.

Some of the patterns are smooth-surfaced. Some are presented in the new Embossed Linoleum in which the tiles stand slightly upraised—the interlining bands of color are pressed in below the surface of the goods.

These designs are beautiful first as floors and then as backgrounds of pattern and color for fine rugs and furnishings.

Once more Armstrong has led the way in presenting something new and beautiful in floors.

"That's something New isn't it?"

"Handcraft Designs"—the soft colorings of oven-baked tile in a comfortable linoleum floor

ONCE more Armstrong offers the new and unusual in floors.

A few years ago women were first offered Armstrong's Jaspé Linoleum with its two-toned softly rippled effect. Next, women found delight in the color and charm of Armstrong's Marble Tile designs.

Now Armstrong offers another pretty floor idea—"Handcraft Inlaids," the soft colorings of oven-baked tile in a comfortable, modern linoleum floor.

"Handcraft" is offered not only in smooth-surfaced linoleum, but also in the new Embossed Inlaids. In Embossed Inlaids the tiles stand slightly upraised beside the mortar-lines that frame them. These mortar-lines are slightly pressed below the surface of the goods.

You'll find these patterns displayed at good furniture and department stores near you.

Look for the CIRCLE A trade-mark on the burlap back

Offered in fourteen color combinations.

"Marbleized" all through

Among the new Armstrong patterns on display you'll find a new group of inlaid designs known as Armstrong's "Marbleized" Linoleum.

At the first glance you will be impressed with the richness of their colorings and the fact that some of these colors, instead of being plain tones, are pleasingly marbleized. But—and this is important—even this marbling or graining is actually inlaid.

Like other inlaid patterns of Armstrong's, these patterns, cemented in place, will wear for a generation—and longer. An occasional coat of wax brings out all the beauty of their colorings.

If you live in an apartment or rent your home, you'll find these new rugs quite indispensable.

Unlike the usual kind of hard-surfaced rugs, these rugs are made of springy, comfortable cork linoleum. They are strong—long-wearing—they have a jute burlap back. Two kinds—inlaid or printed. Sizes 6' x 9' to 12' x 15'.

PRAYER — Lord, Thou deserveth not sacrifice, else would I give it.

THE MAYOR-ELECT.

In I. N. Ragsdale, chosen by a majority over all opponents in Wednesday's election, the city of Atlanta will have a good mayor.

His long public service as a member of the Fulton county board of commissioners, and in other capacities, equips him with an administrative experience that will serve to the advantage of all.

As former chairman of the finance committee of council, and as a veteran citizen who has always taken a keen and a heartening interest in all worth-while matters of a civic nature, he will assume the position as chief executive of this great municipality with a full and comprehensive knowledge of Atlanta's needs, potentialities, opportunities.

Mr. Ragsdale, when he takes the oath of office as mayor, will succeed one of the best mayors in Atlanta's history—Walter Sims, the incumbent.

Mayor-elect Ragsdale was chosen by a flattering vote over other good and upstanding citizens who will cooperate with him in giving Atlanta a progressive administration, looking to the continued material welfare, and to the cultural, educational, social and moral interests of all citizens.

WEST COAST'S TRAGEDY.

The first news as to Florida's storm tragedy centered about Miami, the proud, prosperous city of the lower east coast that had been visited by more people from other parts of the nation, perhaps, than any other Florida city.

But as the hours passed it was found that another section of the state had also undergone human suffering as severe as the suffering in Miami—and more severe, if possible, in proportion to the numbers involved.

The little villages along the banks of Lake Okeechobee were almost completely destroyed, and the larger of these—Moore Haven—presents an indescribable scene of distress.

The property loss is not comparable, of course, with that in the Miami zone, but the death toll is almost if not indeed as great, and the suffering of survivors is beyond human description.

In order to avoid threatened epidemic the town has been ordered evacuated.

Our deepest sympathy goes out to the stricken people in the Okeechobee area.

Relief must go to them. The Red Cross is in charge of the situation, and funds must continue to pour in from those who are able to respond.

THE GROWING SOUTH.

In a striking editorial as to why Florida will rebuild the Brooklyn Eagle says:

"The most amazing economic development in recent years has been the shifting of industry to the south. Today the south is growing faster than any other section. Multitudes of people are going there to work, as well as to play. Other multitudes are seeking a place where life is more leisurely and pleasant, where the extremes of climate are less marked and mere living is less of a strain. All the indications are that, just as the older races in Europe came finally to settle around the Mediterranean, so the civilization of America, in the future, will center around our own Mediteranean, which is the Gulf of Mexico."

This is a frank expression from one of the best friends of the south among the greater eastern newspapers. It is a statement that cannot be challenged.

And by the same token this economic situation, backed by a spirit that never knows defeat, is why a few hurricanes will have no lasting ill effect upon the future of Florida or the south.

People rebuild on the slopes of Vesuvius after every eruption. The lasting monuments of older civilizations scattered along the shores of the Mediterranean marked the progress of men in building to withstand the elements.

Galveston lives today behind a great sea wall. Tragedy taught her the lesson of security. Real men never give up. They build cities and communities and states.

The south is growing as rapidly as stated by the Eagle. It will continue so to grow.

HONORING MR. STEELE.

The Service club of the chamber of commerce will honor at luncheon today Congressman-elect L. J. Steele.

Henderson Hallman, chairman of the club, will preside, and Mr. Steele will make an address.

It is hoped and urged that members of the club attend in large numbers, thus personally complimenting the former DeKalb county representative who will, after the 4th of March, 1927, represent the fifth district in the lower house of congress.

The Service club is to be commended for arranging the tribute to the congressman-elect.

THE MIAMI SPIRIT.

Former Governor James M. Cox, of Ohio, is the owner and publisher of the Miami Daily News. The newspaper home is a great steel tower—the highest building in the tropics. First news accounts said the tower had been almost wrecked by the hurricane. This proved to be exaggerated, and the building, it is now stated, was but slightly impaired. Other steel buildings stood the terrific hammering of the hurricane. This is itself a proven triumph for steel construction.

Speaking of the future of Miami and other storm-swept sections of Florida, Governor Cox has said, as reported in dispatches from Dayton, Ohio:

"Following the disastrous floods of 1913 every Ohio city affected broke all records for business that year. Miami and Florida will come through the effects of this disaster with a courage and resiliency characteristic of the stout-hearted people who have transformed it into one of the world's great empires."

This same sentiment was reflected Thursday in the article by Dr. Sam W. Small, Constitution staff correspondent who is in Miami. "The Miami spirit is unbroken," he wrote.

There is no question as to the rapid and substantial rebuilding of Miami, and the rehabilitation of every other city and town in the stricken area.

Following the great Jacksonville fire of 1901 that city began a period of development that had not been anticipated before. There was a new progressiveness shown that was born of stern and tragic necessity. It is always the case where the people are courageous and intrepid.

As prostrating as has been this blow and as depressing as is the personal sorrow that has befallen such a mass of people, Miami will spring forth, bigger and stouter than ever.

AS TO REFORESTATION.

The statement was made recently by a writer in the Paper Trade Journal that reforestation of cut-over land is best accomplished if left entirely to nature, under protection from fire devastation. The statement was given wide publicity by its republication in the Literary Digest.

It is a matter of such vital concern to the south—and especially to the turpentine belt in which there are millions of acres of cut-over lands, and a wide urgency for reforestation through the utilization of these lands—it is interesting to know that Colonel W. B. Greeley, U. S. forester, and most other leading experts in forestry, take exception to that statement.

Most lumbermen, Colonel Greeley, and other foresters have long held that reforestation is fully 75 per cent a forest fire problem, but Charles R. Berry, who enunciates the hundred per cent proposition in the Paper Trade Journal, is the first to hold that "scientific reforestation" as so far practiced in this country is of doubtful value.

In a telegram from Seattle to the National Lumber Manufacturers' association, Professor B. L. Grondal, who is quoted by Mr. Berry as supporting his views, is represented as saying that the hundred per cent proposition applies in an approximate sense only in certain regions.

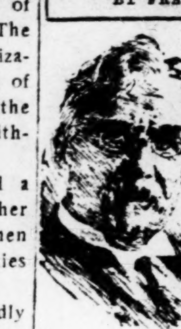

Professor Grondal is of the College of Forestry, University of Washington.

It is generally agreed that the importance of natural reforestation should be emphasized. At the same time there is necessity of partial or complete artificial planting under certain circumstances.

Editorial on "The Danger of Reducing." This, however, doesn't contemplate any high cost of living reduction.

Talking It Over.

Writing in his Commerce News, Editor Shannon says—

"Scientists tell us that the recent storm that almost swept Miami off the face of the earth was generated by hot air 'way out yonder on the ocean. Now will they please tell us what made the air get so hot and cut up so ugly?

"Atlanta is engaged in a drive to raise $100,000 for the relief of Florida sufferers. When a catastrophe like that happens the heart of Atlanta is always found in the right place. Orphanages, hospitals, asylums and relief for sufferers are the fruits of the Christian religion.

"We plan to hobnob with the Georgia editors at Louisville Friday and Saturday of this week. They do say that little country town of 1,500 people plans to give the editors the best time they have ever had at a press meet."

He Goes on Record.

Writing in the Beloit Gazette, Jack Harrison speaks straight out in declining a recent invitation—

"Several excited ladies have asked us to slap on the wrist the musical critic of the Concordia Blade for the severe strictures that appeared in that newspaper on Marion Talley as a vocalist, but there will be nothing doing along this line so far as we are concerned. During one of those periods of mental irresponsibility that come to us frequently, we essayed to criticize a prominent vocalist that appeared here for wearing a bouquet in her hip pocket instead of where it belonged. A long life of rectitude may enable us to live down that incident, but we are not looking for other worlds to conquer as a musical critic."

According to the poet of the Tifton Gazette, even the grouch folk are enjoying the easy life, as follows—

"We're living here in wondrous days, when things are done in wondrous ways.

Conveniences on every hand are everywhere at our command

We wake each morning from the shock that's caused by an alarming clock.

We rise as quickly as we please and dress in togs designed for ease.

We eat a breakfast that's prepared by methods that we all have shared.

Our morning coffee's piercing hot in some convenient coffee pot.

Our bread is toasted crisp and nice in some electric toast device.

The morning paper, what is more, is found reposing by the door."

RAYMUND DANIEL TO ADDRESS MASONS AT PIEDMONT LODGE

A meeting of special interest to Masons will be held at Piedmont lodge tonight at 7:30 o'clock, when Raymund Daniel will make an address on the subject, "Masonic Principles as Viewed by the New Mason."

In connection with his address, Mr. Daniel will deliver diplomas to a class of 15 candidates recently initiated, who will stand an examination Friday night. Following the address the entered apprentice degree will be conferred upon a new class by the worshipful master, Walter LeCraw.

STEELE TO SPEAK TO CHAMBER BODY AT LUNCH TODAY

The service committee of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce will hold its second semi-monthly luncheon of the fall season in the chamber's assembly hall at 12:30 o'clock today.

Congressman-elect L. J. Steele, of Decatur, will be the speaker of the occasion. In his first public address since his election as representative from the Fifth district, Mr. Steele will outline his policies and principles. He will be introduced by Norman C. Miller.

The service committee has charge of a series of luncheon throughout the fall and winter, each meeting to be addressed by some man of prominence, and several hundred members of the chamber are invited. Henderson Hallman, the chairman, has charge of arrangements.

INTEREST DISPLAYED IN BAPTIST REVIVAL

Great interest is being displayed in the revival services at the Third Baptist church on Luckie street. The Rev. R. L. Baker, pastor, is preaching the sermons this week, while the Rev. C. D. Nicholson, of the home mission board, will preach during the revival next week.

Attendances at the revival are larger than during any previous series of meetings at the Third Baptist church. A chorus of 50 voices and the Georgia quartet furnishes music for the meetings. Professor Cochran is leader of the choir.

EVERYDAY QUESTIONS

ANSWERED BY

DR. S. PARKES CADMAN

Williamsport, Pa.

Since love cannot be commanded, should a man and wife who have ceased to love one another and between whom there is an ever-widening gulf continue to live together for the sake of young children whom they both love?

Yes, so long as they show their respect for each other and do not turn their children's home into a den of wrangling and strife.

We hear so much of the feminist movement, woman's emancipation, the efficiency of woman in business and their replacement of men that I am tempted to ask you what is the application of I Timothy ii, 12, "But I suffer not a woman to teach nor usurp authority over the man."

What have you got to say?

The writer of these words lived in a society dominated by the masculine element. Woman then had few if any rights which man needed to respect. The ferment of the Christian religion worked very rapidly at that time in the great cities of the Greco-Roman Empire. One of its results was a new sense of freedom in believing women, especially at Corinth, the most cosmopolitan center of the empire.

The leaders of the Corinthian church had to proceed cautiously in applying St. Paul's revolutionizing principle that "in Christ there is no male or female," because of the lax views about woman's honor which then prevailed among Jews and Gentiles alike.

For a side light on the passage you quote read what the New Testament says about such women as the Virgin Mary and Mary Magdalene, also of the work of Priscilla, Mary, Tryphaena, Tryphosa and Persis, all of whom were prominently identified with the infant church in Rome. If Priscilla could teach even the eloquent Apollos what the Divine Way really was, surely this shows that she successfully defied the rule you quote.

Would you call an educated person a cultured person? And does it necessarily follow that those who have acquired considerable knowledge are trustworthy interpreters and guides of life.

An educated person is not necessarily a cultured person, nor are those who have been well trained in the liberal arts and sciences always dependable leaders in consequence.

Consult the lists of prophets, priests and kings of any period and you will discover that although they could not have culture without a measure of education, not a few of them did have education, with or without culture.

One of the most genial, humane and wholesome characters I ever knew was a farmer of Dutchess county, New York state. His scholastic advantages had been scanty enough. But his vivid imagination, his keen perception of truth, his fine sense of beauty, and his capacity for clear and balanced statement kindled my warm admiration.

Such men and women are all too rare, but they are far more numerous than some intellectuals concede. Nor do they have to be experts in a particular art or science to be either educated or cultured.

Culture consists in what one is rather than in what one knows. It breathes a gracious and elevating temper into the most commonplace pursuits. When accompanied by great learning, it often produces the master spirits of their day. My farmer friend was a truly cultured man and all in his locality recognized him as such.

New York City.

Did God actually command Abraham to offer up Isaac? This incident has bothered me more than any other recorded in the Old Testament. Please explain it.

It did not bother Abraham's generation. He lived in a primitive age when the offering of human sacrifices was common, especially in periods of disaster. Even the enlightened Greeks believed such sacrifices to be "good medicine" for bad times.

So in the Hebrew scriptures the King of Moab offered his eldest son as a sacrifice, and Jephthah is said to have done the same with his daughter. The classic tale of Iphigenia is well known to scholars. She was brought to the altar by her father to be sacrificed, but mysteriously disappeared, and a hind lay there in her stead. Fraser's work, "The Golden Bough," discusses this and other ancient religious practices, and I have referred to them in my book on "Imagination and Religion."

The main purport of the instance which perplexes you was to demonstrate the necessity of unquestioning obedience to the Divine Will. As the sequel shows, God did not desire human sacrifice. But He demanded unwavering confidence in Himself from a leader appointed to elevate the religion of Israel above the barbaric levels of surrounding cults.

As you suggest in your letter, there are symbolic elements in the story, but these do not exclude the idea that it has a historical nucleus.

RIVERS ELECTED DIRECTOR IN JOINT BANKERS' GROUP

E. Rivers, president of the Atlanta Joint Stock Land bank, vice president of the Stone Mountain Memorial association, was elected a director of the American Association of Joint Stock Land banks at the annual convention just held in Detroit.

Although established only eight years ago, Joint Stock Land banks of the country already have outstanding more than $600,000,000 in farm loans. The Atlanta Joint Stock Land bank, organized three years ago, now has assets exceeding $6,000,000.

As an evidence of the strong faith of investors in the prosperity of the south, present and future, the Atlanta Joint Stock Land bank recently sold an issue of bonds through its New York brokers, C. F. Childs and company, in advance of the date of issuance. Bonds bore interest at 5 per cent and were offered at 103 3-4.

The Atlanta Joint Stock Land bank, like others in the system, is under federal supervision. It makes loans on farms at a low rate of interest for a period of 30 years and charges no commission.

HEALTH TALKS

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

WHAT PRICE DOCTORS.

A state hospital in South Dakota advertises for an assistant physician, male, single, recent graduate class A school, and invites aspirants to send references, credentials, personal description and photograph. The prize berth carries a whale of a salary—$34.61 a week and maintenance.

A large university hospital wants an experienced bacteriologist who has had training in clinical microscopy, and offers to pay such a man $2,400 a year.

A class A 175 bed hospital offers $4,000 a year to an experienced medical superintendent who can handle problems and people. Such a doctor will get his house, too.

A New Jersey institution advertises for assistant physicians, class A graduates, single, American citizens, with good general education and hospital experience, and holds out a rosy inducement of salaries ranging from $1,500 away up as high as $2,500 a year, plus maintenance.

A 500-bed Pennsylvania hospital wants a "chief resident physician," who must be a graduate of a class A school, and must have had at least a year's internship in an approved hospital. If such a man seeks such a berth he can have it with the princely salary of $1,000 a year plus board and room.

A Massachusetts sanitarium for tuberculosis desires a recent graduate of a class A school as assistant physician, and will pay the doctor from $1,800 to $2,000 per annum with maintenance.

Numerous physicians and specialists advertise for assistants to whom they offer to pay $50 to $75 a month with board and room.

In many instances the physician taking such a position receives experience or training of inestimable value, but whatever advantages of that sort a place may mean for the doctor the fact remains that the doctor is giving his professional service, which is certainly full payment for any such benefits accruing to the incumbent.

It is high time that institutions requiring medical service or nursing service were made to pay an honest compensation for such service. It is really a scandal how most of our big hospitals obtain the services of young women as pupil nurses through a period of years and at only a nominal "allowance." These girls, while in training, do a vast amount of the hardest kind of work. They ought to be paid honestly for that work, even though the rate of payment be the same as the hospital has to give a chambermaid or a housemaid or a waitress. Perhaps if the hospitals could get away from their slick policy and pay honestly for the service pupil nurses render in the two or three years of the training course there would be less difficulty in finding suitable applicants for the nurse's training schools. Competent young women nowadays think twice before giving three years of their home for instruction in nursing.

The young doctor, recent graduate of a class A school, is wise to shut his eyes, grit his teeth and plunge in somewhere on his own. He will have hard hoeing, to be sure, but he has a fair chance to get somewhere. If he weakens, gets cold feet and takes a salaried job as assistant, well, he isn't likely to find more courage later in life.

Sale of Tickets For Artist Series Season Ends Soon

Music lovers of Atlanta and vicinity are advised that the season ticket sale for the All-Star Artist series will close Saturday, after which the single admission prices will pervail at much higher prices. Those attending three of the five attractions at the single admission rate will pay as much as they would for a season ticket to all five numbers.

There has been a splendid sale so far insuring almost capacity houses to hear these five attractions and the tickets will continue on sale at Phillips & Crew Piano store until Saturday night.

Never before has such an expensive series of attractions been offered to the people of Atlanta at such low rates. The program, which is unusually attractive and varied including Will Rogers, the international humorist, assisted by the De Reszke Singers, as the opening number on October 19. Then Elsie Janis, America's greatest musical comedy star, assisted by a grand quartet, comes as the second number on November 4.

The outstanding musical event of the season in Atlanta will undoubtedly be the coming of Feodor Chaliapin and company in a presentation of Rossini's masterpiece, "The Barber of Seville," on December 14.

Frieda Hempel will follow on January 14, and Mikhail Mordkin and his Russian ballet will close the series on March 9. Reserved seats for all the above attractions can be had for $5.50, or at the rate of $1.10 each, if a season ticket is secured before the end of this week.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

New York, September 23.—Gotham's critics say that she is a cold, unfriendly city—that she is too much the big town to permit of any of the warm friendly little actions which make the small town attractive to the lonely soul. Where they ask, in the rushing bustling crowd of Manhattanites, eternally engaged in pushing and shoving the other fellow, will you find the simple rustic soul who pauses in his daily grind to do a friendly turn to somebody else? And sometimes as I watch the grim-faced throng rush the guards at Forty-second street, knocking down women and children in the frantic effort to grab two inches of sitting space for the trip home, I'm tempted to agree with the critics—there are no pleasant leisurely deeds of kindness in New York today. Yet sometimes the critics don't hear all the news. There are New Yorkers who have the genial small-town spirit.

* * * *

Occasionally there comes to my notice a golden instance of selfless love for a fellow creature. The other day on Nassau street (and who by the woy would ever expect to find a trace of the home-town spirit on that crowded narrow, dirty, thoroughly urban thoroughfare, which runs between eternal rows of lingerie shops to end near the dusty old World building?) a bareheaded figure wandered leisurely up its narrow confines and halted near the old Tribune building, once the home of a famous newspaper, now the workshop of a famous newspaper syndicate. The hatless gentleman, Bob Sherwood, former circus clown and present proprietor of a wholesale book shop farther down Nassau street, is a ruddy-faced customer with a genial eye. He was carrying a mysterious looking brown paper parcel under his arm, and as he neared the Tribune building he raised a lusty shout of "Hey, Bill!" addressed to the executive windows of the syndicate offices. Presently a head appeared and Bill sang out casually: "Hello, what's on your mind?" "Got something for you," confided the successful book dealer at the top of his voice.

* * * *

"Well, bring it up," suggested the head at the window. "It won't do me any good down there." Accordingly Bob solemnly trudged up the long flight of impressive marble steps and entered the syndicate office with a large grin of unselfish delight on his good-humored face. "Just thought I'd drop in with a little present for you," he explained to his host. "Got a nice little mint julep here. What do you say?" Who shall say that the spirit of good fellowship has died, even in the busy crowded marts of lower New York?

* * * *

However, just as the critics say, we have our representatives who show their selfishness in different ways. Take for instance the gunman who was recently caught and charged with having shot a policeman in attempting to make his getaway. The thug was taken to the wounded officer in the hospital where the latter lay, in a very dangerous condition. Patrolman J—— the wounded man may indeed die at any moment. He was conscious though when the gunman was brought into him and instantly identified him as the man who'd shot him. "Hully, Chee, have a heart," begged the culprit. "Think what this means to me. It's murder I'll stand for, if you croak." Still the stony-hearted minion of the law was not moved by this beautiful example of man's brotherhood to man.

* * * *

Formerly you ran into the big bank president with his favorite manicurist, in one of the quiet little French restaurants, just off, or just on Park avenue. Now you meet him at the Shelton pool. The white-rimmed blue waters of the swimming pool at the Hotel Shelton, hold a poignant attraction for the tired business man whose country home is too far out of town to permit of commuting, and whose wife is too far away to admit of scruples. Consequently all through the summer, and into these mild fall days, one will find at the close of business the grizzly financier in all the glory of the latest thing in swimming suits with this youthful companion in her trim one-piece glove fitting costume. Somehow the spectable of those two at a restaurant doesn't make the big business man appear as ridiculous as he does in these little swimming frolics. In the quiet sanctity of a small room at Voisin's for instance, he looks old—yes, but old and grave and very important. Frolicking beside the azure tinted water he is slightly ridiculous. The protruding knees, amazingly thick legs, slightly noticeable corporation, and curiously inadequate neck give him an air of the grotesque. And his red-capped, smartly garbed companion gazes at this specimen of manhood with considerable less respect than she experienced toward him when as a well-dressed and prosperous looking business man he first leaned across the manicure table toward her, and inquired whether she was averse to a good show and perhaps a bite of supper afterward. Truly the sugar daddies who make the Shelton pool their playground would do better to stay on dry land fully clad in all the usual garments conducive to male beauty.

* * * *

The riveting machine is the most modern instrument of torture to be used on the tired city-dweller. Hardly a street in New York hasn't at some-time been subjected to that gruelling form of torment, night and day. On a particularly depressing day last week, a traffic jam occurred opposite the Hotel Lorraine where an enormous building is in process of construction. The riveting machine was going full tilt, raising its deafening, nerve racking shriek to Heaven, while in the road, angry motorists, honked vigorously to indicate a desire for immediate departure. The din was horrifying. On the sidewalk a tired, white-faced woman turned savagely to the little boy who dragged at her skirts. "For Heaven's sake, shut up your whining, Willie," she commanded him irritably. "I can't hear myself think for the noise you're makin'."

TWO MEN.

The greatest educator that America has ever produced is dead. The greatest "shiek" is dead. All honor to two successful men, each of whom endeared themselves in the hearts of the American people, each in his own way. One lived 92 years, the other died at the early age of 31.

They died and were headlined the same week. But what a contrast!

Valentino's funeral brought such a crowd and created such excitement that women were trampled, plate glass windows broken, and the police reserves had to be called. No one plunged through plate glass windows to honor Charles W. Eliot. But women—yes, and men, too—stood, pushed, crushed, fought, and nearly died that they might get a glimpse of someone who was somewhere near the spot where final honors were being given to Rudolph Valentino.

I am not going to moralize over the situation, nor find any fault. To me both men were great in their respective fields; both men had reached fame by honorable methods; both men had been rewarded during their lifetime by the American public. One had received a score of high honorary degrees, a very modest fortune in dollars, and a grat fortune in enduring fame. The other had received the plaudits of the multitude, and the daily mail of his admirers was probably a thousand times greater than the mail of the gerat educator. One had simple burial services from a modest summer home off the coast of Maine; the other was honored by a great and gorgeous spectacle.

One might well give a good deal of thought to the reasons why the instinct of the mob, has such a morbid and unnatural way of showing itself upon the death of a well-known character. But what interests me is: How are we going to keep before our youth the permanent satisfactions of life when they have set before them such a marked contrast? Are these satisfactions money, popularity, and temporal fame; or, do they consist of a moderate income, a few firm friends, the respect of a small community, and a work well done which lives through the ages?

I overheard two young college boys: "Gee! Think of it, his life was insured for a million dollars; he got 4,000 letters a day from his admirers; look at his funeral, see the mob there! I tell you education doesn't pay. Who ever heard of Eliot?"

Then the other boy: "Yes, that's all true enough, but my father is always telling us children about his wonderful days at Harvard, the greatness and wonderfulness of President Eliot, the things which he did, the influence he had on the lives of thousands of his tudents, the dignity with which he conducted his office, the thoroughness of his scholarship, and the enduringness of his fame. I would rather be Eliot than Valentino!"

Yes, the second boy may be right—and yet both men were great. Both have touched the hearts of the people. I grant that most boys would like to step into the shoes of Valentino, and that few would choose Eliot's.

And, as a young girl just said to me: "So would a lot of girls like to step into Trudy Ederle's bathing suit."

OUR CONVERSATION CORNER.

Attracting Attention.

What do you think about these girls who go through our streets practically naked? A Man.

Answer—To tell you the truth, I don't think much about them. The novelty has worn off. Of course there will be a swing in the other direction because fashion change and women, quite naturally, like to attract attention. I understand that some of the rather clever girls are getting on to the idea that they are not attracting enough attention by their lack of clothing, so they are putting on more clothes, trusting that in that way they will appeal more to that curiosity and interest which comes from concealment.

T. N. T.

Did you read what a Philadelphia man said about burning all the women's colleges and that he believed "a child born of a woman who has been to college should be taken from the mother as soon as weaned and placed in some institution where it would be properly cared for?" What do you think of it? Seeking Facts.

Answer—I think that man wants publicity and I, for one, will not accommodate him by mentioning names. I happen to have on my desk another of his thoughts: "To make women normal again after they have spent four years at college studying psychoanalysis, inferiority complex, the hereness of the there, and the wentness of the gone, is an impossibility." His ink bottle is marked T. N. T., which means that he explodes Twaddle, Not Thought.

Have To Raze Meyer-Kiser Building, Atlantan Declares

:: STORM RUINS 17-STORY STRUCTURE IN MIAMI ::

Damage to the 17-story Meyer-Kiser building in Miami, as a result of the Florida hurricane of Friday and Saturday, will necessitate razing of the structure, declared Harvey E. Farmer, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Farmer, of 22 S. W. Rawson street, Wednesday upon his return from the wrecked "magic city."

Irreparable bulges about the fifth floor of the Meyer-Kiser building will mean that the entire building must be taken down and rebuilt in order to prevent the structural weakness from causing a crash of the skyscraper at some future time, Mr. Farmer said.

"There was a veritable shower of brick and other building materials from the Meyer-Kiser building at the height of the storm and even afterward," he said. "The area around the building was roped off to keep people from wandering into the danger zone. Other skyscrapers suffered badly from the blow, but none so seriously as this building.

All Buildings Damaged.

"Not a single Miami building stood undamaged after the storm, while many skyscrapers and other high buildings had their roofs and upper floors blown off, while loose stuff from the buildings flew around in the air as though an Arkansas cyclone had struck town."

After facing roaring gales in the canyons of downtown Miami, swimming across flooded streets and wading waist deep across others, clinging to anything that held in order to avoid being blown away altogether, the peaceful quiet of his family's home on Rawson street, was a welcome relief for Mr. Farmer.

During the lull in the storm Friday night, Mr. Farmer went downtown in Miami, like many others, to obtain some idea of the damage. While going back to his home on Northwest Seventh avenue, he was caught in the second and more disastrous blow, and had to exercise every precaution to escape death.

Safety In Church.

He found both the Fifth street bridge and the Flagler street bridge under water. Blocked from crossing, he had parked his car when the wind almost turned it over, and he then sought refuge in a nearby church building with a friend, Frank Castalaw. The pair secured two hours sleep in the basement of the church after entering through a broken window, and woke up to find six inches of water on the floor.

"We started for home again, bucking a wind which almost took our breath away. The wind spun me around several times and nearly blew me down, but Frank caught me in time. After a while, we found safety in a house on Northwest Fifth avenue, near the river. The church across the street had been blown down and houseboats were floating around several blocks from the natural river bed," he said.

"All around our house we found wrecked homes and stores, though the place we were staying was not badly damaged. Our friends thought us dead, and were joyfully surprised when we finally walked in the front door."

Never Know All Dead.

Mr. Farmer's closest shave came Friday night, about 1 o'clock, when he went to bed. Unable to sleep with the storm roaring over the house, he got up and dressed. A few minutes later a heavy plate glass window blew across his bed and shattered into thousands of pieces where he had been lying.

"We will never know the full loss of lives, for numbers of people were killed on boats in the harbor and their bodies drifted out to sea," he declared. "I counted 15 bodies in one small undertaking parlor, while there were probably 200 dead in Miami altogether. Most of the victims were not killed outright, but were fatally injured by flying timbers and died later in hospitals. Many casualties came from drowning," he said. "During the lull in the storm, thousands of people rushed to Miami Beach over the narrow causeway to see the damage at the beach, and hundreds were caught on the long causeway by the second storm, which swung in from a different direction to the first.

Food Fairly Plentiful.

"The soldiers would not let us stand on street corners after 11 o'clock at night, under martial law, and every precaution was taken to prevent looting. Those arriving on trains were given permits to go right to their homes. I managed to snap some pictures of the wreckage, as I carried a camera under my arm all the time.

"A great deal of the drinking water was secured from rain which people caught in buckets after the water was shut off. Many persons drank bottled drinks, while food was fairly plentiful. Lots of people secured their provisions by raiding ruined grocery stores, and a bread line was formed for those who had no money or other means of finding food. Many people lost their clothes in the storm and were forced to wear bathing suits."

"My Life Story"

Written by Rudolph Valentino.

Rudolph Valentino in this chapter paints with words of love a picture of his mother that is one of the greatest tributes ever written.

"The love of my father and my mother," he writes, "was one of the true loves of the world, one of the dearest married loves it has ever been my privilege to see—a lasting love."

20TH INSTALLMENT.

That day in Paris several days ago, I was sitting in our suite awaiting the interviewers.

As soon as Andre Daven entered I "spotted" him, as they say in New York. And I was not wrong. I had confirmation by the fact that Natacha's eyes met mine on the instant and we nodded as if to say, "Ah, you recognize him, too—"

I began to interview, instead of being interviewed.

I asked him his name, his occupation, his ambitions and various questions of a like nature, which doubtless took him considerably by surprise, seeing as he had come to do the same thing to me.

He told me his name, and that he was writing for Bonsior, Theater et Comedia Illustre and the Paris Journal.

I immediately came back at him with the suggestion that he go into pictures.

He replied it was unthinkable.

My obstinacy was aroused, together with my rising belief in young Daven as a screen possibility. I set out to convince him that he should give up the art of writing for the art of the screen.

I told him of my own plans, and assured him that if he would accompany me back to the United States upon my return, I would give him a part in my next picture, whatever it might be.

I told him that I was hoping to do "Monsieur Beaucaire," and that if I did, there would certainly be a good part in it for him.

I had to talk a long while. I don't suppose any other screen beginner in the annals of the screen ever had to have so much pressure brought to bear upon him (or her) as did the "distrait" Monsieur Daven. But he finally gave me his word that he would be with me when I should sail for America again.

Tomorrow—Italy.

We are still here tonight. Tomorrow we go to—Italy!

I have another Genoan night in which to write my diary.

I had to expect to go on, but Natacha is feeling rather badly. I begin to fear she will not be able to "make the grade" with us all of the way.

Auntie and I laugh at her, and tell her she should have our strength and nerve, but when it comes to the aforementioned dirt, dust and dishelvement, plus my driving, which I am sure Natacha would describe as "reprehensible," it is a bit too much for Natacha's sense of humor.

I suppose each one of us meets the special thing we cannot stand—the proverbial straw that breaks the traditional camel's back. This sort of a trip is that straw to Natacha. Not that I think it would be if she had started out on the journey feeling fit, but the last year or two have been trying and difficult ones for her. And because she has met them with high courage, the calm, the earnest belief in the eventual rightness of our cause, it has told upon her endurance.

I have often noted about women that they can stand up under the most tremendous strains, the most devastating calamities, and will break under some slight thing—such as motoring on one wheel, for instance!

One of the Truest Loves.

I remember today with a sharply etched distinctness the time of my father's death.

There was something very close and beautiful, very dear and intimate between my mother and my father. I think it was one of the true loves of the world, one of the dearest married loves it has ever been my privilege to see. In fact, if I have any idealism concerning marriage and the one, the great, the lasting love (and I have), I owe it to that early example.

If I had been told, beforehand, that my father was to die, I would have prophesied that it would break, kill, annihilate my mother. I would have declared that she would never survive it, never stand up under the loss.

Too Great To Bear.

It would have been the destroying brief, not to be endured.

But my father did die. And when he died my mother was one of the Spartan women—tearless and upright. Grief she knew, of course. But in her grief I had the feeling that she was sustained by some inner thing that no one else could know. Some secret and beautiful knowledge of a bond between my father and herself that even death had no power to sever. They were still together—and she knew it.

There are some few marriages like that. Two individualities come together, maintain their separate individualities, if they have the proper spirit, but their life streams merge, become one, and are never divisible again, even when death seems to strike them asunder.

It was, I believe this lovely and tender and mystical spirit that gave my mother the proud and beautiful strength she had when my father's earthly presence passed away from her. She knew what she knew.

Woman's holy courage was first revealed to me in my mother. I saw it first at my father's deathbed, even as I saw his part in it when he called my brother Alberto and myself to his bedside, turned his face, already pale and fixed in the final lineaments of death, held out the crucifix and said to us, "My boys, love your mother, and, above all—love your country."

Silent in Grief.

The tall cathedral candles—the flowers massed in symbolic designs—my sister sobbing softly by my side—my brother pale and with compressed lips—I, myself, sobbing, too, though trying to restrain myself—and, seeming to be the center of it all, the pale, frail, silent and indomitable figure of my mother, bearing her great grief as an acolyte bears the trappings of some sacramental task.

Later on, after the funeral had become a solemn part of a distant past, I can remember her kneeling before the altar candles in the cathedral, not so much praying as holding communion with him who had but preceded her. Still loving him. Still feeling the sense of togetherness.

Holiness of Love.

Love can never be a light thing with me with such memories. My boyish heart was thus early impressed, sealed, by the enduringness of love. I shall never forget it, never come from under that first profound seriousness and beauty of the right love of the one man for the one woman, and vice versa.

I often think that such endurance as came to me in my later trials, my days of starvation and privation in New York, may have come to me direct from that brave and gallant little figure of my mother. For she had learned a stern lesson in the classroom of courage and fortitude. Even her early life was a preparation, for she had gone through the terrors and privations of the siege of Paris.

"Does one ever know women?" The "Great Lover" asks that question and answers it in tomorrow's installment of his intimate, heart-to-heart story of his life. All the thoughts that come to him as he journeys to his boyhood home are set down as only Rudolph Valentino himself could record his heart throbs. Don't miss tomorrow's paper.

work out this in cooperation with the ladies' auxiliary, where it is thought a similar program will be followed for the high schools girls of the county.

The legion will also sponsor a historical organization for the entire county and will put the beginnings of a Burke county history in the courthouse at Waynesboro. Committees were appointed to look into this phase of the work. The legion will also be represented at the convention which meets in Philadelphia in October, it was stated.

STATE JEWISH LEADERS TO ATTEND CONVENTION

More than 100 Jewish leaders throughout the state of Georgia have been invited to attend the continental conference of the United Jewish campaign, to be held in Chicago October 9-10, for the purpose of discussing questions that have arisen in connection with the raising of $25,000,000 to relieve destitute coreligionists in eastern and central Europe, it was stated by A. D. G. Cohn, field director of the southeast and southwest.

David A. Brown, chairman of the United Jewish campaign, and Felix M. Warburg, chairman of the joint distribution committee, summoned the conference, which will be held at the Standard club in Chicago, and will be attended by representatives of the race in the United States and Canada.

Reports will be heard from the chairmen and officers of the campaign and officials of state and community drives.

M'KENZIE, ATLANTAN, AMONG STORM DEAD

The body of Frank McKenzie, 32, former Atlantan and a graduate of Georgia Tech in the class of 1923, who was reported among the missing in the Florida hurricane, has been washed up at Miami Beach, according to information received Thursday by his aunt, Mrs. Joe W. Ellison, of 650 Highland avenue. No details of the drowning were received in the message.

Mr. McKenzie is the son of R. E. McKenzie, well-known citizen of Rome, Ga., and veteran conductor on the Southern railroad. Upon learning of his son's death, the father left for Miami to bring the body back to Rome for funeral services and interment.

Frank McKenzie was well-known in Atlanta. After serving in the world war as a second lieutenant, he entered Georgia Tech and was graduated in the class of 1923. During his stay at Tech he worked in the composing room of The Constitution for several months.

In addition to his parents, he is survived by two brothers, R. E. Jr., and Roy McKenzie; two sisters, Mrs. W. A. Dobson and Miss Marguerite McKenzie, and an aunt, Mrs. Ellison.

AUDITORS NAMED TO TAKE TESTIMONY IN SALARY SUITS

Following a hearing in which attorneys representing the junior chamber of comerce, the Atlanta Legal Aid society and 438 petitioners asked that injunction proceedings restraining salary buyers from proceeding by garnishment or attachment to collect claims against wage earners be placed for adjudication in municipal court, Judge G. H. Howard in Fulton superior court rejected a consent order.

When the hearing was opened before Judge Howard the attorneys presented a consent order opposing the appointment of the auditors in the case and providing that the injunctions be so modified that loan companies might sue in municipal court for claims alleged due them, the judgment of that court to become the judgment of the superior court.

Five Atlanta attorneys, Lowry Arnold, George P. Whitman, Leon Tumlinson, J. V. Poole and W. F. Buchanan, were appointed as auditors by the court to take testimony and ascertain findings in the 438 suits now in Fulton superior court.

The order appointing auditors to hear the injunction suits, the salary-buying loans, is likely to lead to an appeal to the state court of appeals. J. L. R. Boyd, general counsel of the Atlanta Legal Aid society, declared.

MISS GENIE SMITH, HURRICANE VICTIM, IS BURIED HERE

Funeral services for Miss Genie Smith, 32, formerly of Atlanta, who was killed Saturday morning during the storm at Hialeah, Fla., were held Thursday afternoon from the chapel of Harry G. Poole. The Rev. William Keershaw officiated and interment was in West View cemetery.

She is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Smith, three brothers, William B., Charley and Clark Smith, and two sisters, Mrs. W. K. Couch and Mrs. J. L. Nelms.

Amusements

Rialto Theater.

"Forlorn River," a western melodrama that lives fully up to the high standard of Zane Grey, the author, is the feature picture at the Rialto this week, and it is nearing the close of the week's run.

The picture has for its stars Jack Holt, Arlotte Marchal, Raymond Hatton and Edmund Burns and is said to be full of the finest acting. There is an educational comedy called "Who Hit Me?" that provides twenty minutes of uproarious laughter.

Loew's Grand.

Myers and Hanford, two of vaudeville's recognized leaders as fun makers, are the headliners on the special bill of vaudeville at Loew's Grand theater this week which was sent here in celebration of the 20th anniversary of the advent of Marcus Loew in the show business. Myers and Hanford have a line of fun which is peculiarly their own and they are scoring big successes at every performance. Another act of the big-time class is "Love As Is." The four Rubini sisters, talented musicians, offer a pretentious musical program including both classical and popular selections. The Loew feature picture is "The Conquering Power," with Rudolph Valentino.

The Forsyth.

"Seventh Heaven," now nearing its close at the Forsyth theater, is perhaps one of the greatest stories of Paris slum life ever written. It is John Golden's work, but its great kick is supplied by Edith Speare as Diane and James Coots as Chico.

Gus Forbes, old favorite, along with Alan Lavitt and Jay Mulrey, have splendid roles and are contributing much to entertain Forsyth crowds.

Next week's attraction will be "Apple Sauce," a screamingly funny comedy that will find plenty of fans in Atlanta.

Tenth Street Theater.

The Tenth Street theater, Atlanta's newest theatrical enterprise, will be opened Monday with the showing of the Paramount laugh special, "The Cohens and the Kellys." The new theater is located at the corner of Peachtree and Tenth streets.

The Tenth Street theater is said to be the finest community theater in the south. It is a model of Spanish architecture with the Spanish scheme followed in interior furnishings.

Equipment for the new theater is the most modern. A "washed air" cooling system and the latest type of oil heating plant are features that are calculated to add to the popularity of the theater. Air cushioned seats and up-to-the-minute projection machines are also installed.

West End Theater.

A motion picture that moves with the celerity of a machine gun. That is Zane Grey's story of a great family feud and how it affected a girl. John Waters has brought it to the screen in Paramount's new western, "Born to the West," which stars Jack Holt and Mary Morris. "Born to the West" is the story of two school boys who fought over a girl. When they reach manhood—but you had better see the film at the West End theater, where it is playing its last time today.

The Howard Theater.

There are just two days left in which to enjoy the Bert Lytell and Billie Dove starring vehicle, "The Lone Wolf Returns," the thrilling adaption of Louis Joseph Vance's final story of the adventures of Michael Lanyard at the Howard.

Frank Cambria's "Circus Week" is this week's Publix stage feature. This unique entertainment opens with the customary parade and is staged in two scenes, one outside a circus tent and the other under the big top. Here is seen a program of circus entertainment such a Ringling Brothers would be proud to present in any town. News reel of Miami disaster.

The Metropolitan.

Authorship of the story, "The Great Deception," in which Ben Lyon and Aileen Pringle are delighting crowded houses at the Metropolitan theater this week, is ascribed to George Gibbs, well-known American novelist and short story writer. Mr. Gibbs wrote "The Yellow Dove," from which "The Great Deception" was adapted. Leide and his Metropolitan orchestra and the latest issue of the Metropolitan News and Views are the extra features.

Corinne Griffith, in her latest photoplay, "Into Her Kingdom," will be the attraction extraordinary at the Metropolitan theater next week.

Tudor Theater.

Thrills in abundance, a great story of the west, fast moving action, are all in "The Fighting Stallion," which is having its first Atlanta showing at the Tudor theater now.

The picture stars the champion of the saddle, Yakima Canutt, whose ability as a rider has been displayed in scores of rodeos all over the west.

Combining a real story of the west with that of a wonderful and terrible horse, the fighting stallion, the picture is a knockout for entertainment.

VALDOSTA FORWARDS MONEY AND GOODS

Valdosta, Ga., September 23.—(Special.)—Valdosta's voluntary cash contributions to Florida storm sufferers up to tonight amounts to $1,900

In addition to cash contributed, several large truckloads of food and other goods have been given and dispatched to south Florida. Also many express shipments of articles needed have been forwarded.

PRESIDENT HEARS RETURNS OF FIGHT AT MUSICAL SHOW

Washington, September 23.—President and Mrs. Coolidge heard the fight returns tonight while attending the theater. They went to see the four Marx brothers in "The Cocoanuts," the first musical show the president has seen since he went into the white house. He has seen "Hamlet" and "Robert E. Lee" and a vaudeville performance or two only since he became president.

No more RHEUMATISM

IT'S GONE! That awful agony! Rheumatism can't stand the rich, red blood that S. S. S. helps Nature build.

But rheumatism will bring pain and misery to your joints and muscles just as long as you are without plenty of rich, red blood in your system.

It's the red-blood-cells that S. S. S. helps Nature build that drive out of your system the impurities that cause rheumatism. And until you do build up your blood to where it is pure and rich and red, you simply can't get rid of rheumatism.

And S. S. S. is the thing. Red blood conquers rheumatism. Everybody knows that.

S. S. S. means millions of red-blood-cells—means health all over. No more rheumatism. Nights of rest — days of joy, filled with the happiness of accomplishment—made possible by a body brimful of red blooded life, energy and vitality.

S.S.S.

That's what the end of rheumatism means—that's what S. S. S. brings to you. Get S. S. S. from your druggist. The larger bottle is more economical.

The Day in Finance

Stock Market, Still Nervous Over Federal Reserve Rediscount Rate, Continues Very Irregular in Price Range.

By R. L. BARNUM

New York, September 23.—Call money again renewed at 5 1-2 per cent, but dropped at noon to 5. Despite this and the fact that the rediscount rate of the Boston Federal Reserve bank remained unchanged at 4 per cent the stock market continued very irregular and nervous as a result of uncertainty as to what the federal reserve bank here would do with its rediscount rate at the meeting late in the day.

On one point, opinion in speculative Wall street is agreed. This is a good time for people who have made money in the stock market to be out of the market looking on. Apparently there is little selling pressure in good stocks.

On the other hand, on the law of averages, the next price movement of any importance from the existing high level should be downward. From long experience trained speculators are distrustful of the stock market when recognized industrial and financial leaders say, as they are now saying, that there is no cloud in the sky.

Await Unexpected.

Usually when the general financial and industrial situation and outlook is so good and so promising that there is no cloud in the sky something unfavorable happens from some unexpected source. With this in mind, much was made in Wall street today of the widely-quoted statement of Charles M. Schwab that American industry should prepare itself for competition that is coming in the very near future from abroad.

It has been recognized all along that as Europe recovers from the war it will mean increased competition for us industrially. This, however, has been thought of as something to occur in the distant future. It remains to be seen what effect increasing competition from abroad will have on our industrial output now running at a high rate. Preliminary estimates of unfilled orders of the steel corporation for September circulated in Wall street today indicate a decrease of 200,000 tons. This estimate is based on the belief that shipments have been running ahead of incoming new business.

A well known Wall street banker in close touch with the automobile industry said today that it was surprising to hear every automobile manufacturer commenting in a friendly way on the showing of General Motors, this comment running to the effect, as the banker put it, that "General Motors has the stuff, and will go through with it." He added, however, that automobile manufacturers were not alarmed at the outlook believing that, for the most part, car owners on buying a new car will stick to the car now being used.

Nickel Plate Jumps.

Nickel Plate crossed 200 today for the first time after having almost reached this mark several times only to slip back. This stock has been advancing steadily from around 67 in 1923 on merger rumors. George F. Baker, who is heavily interested in the Nickel Plate merger expressed the opinion recently on returning from abroad that the proposed merger would go through in its modified form. This is the belief in all well informed Wall street circles and accounts for the new high price reached today.

Chesapeake & Ohio, which is included in the Nickel Plate merger plan, also was strong on advance information that the minority Chesapeake & Ohio shareholders who are fighting for better terms were about to make a new drive. It was these shareholders who upset the Nickel Plate merger plans. That Chesapeake & Ohio has arrived in the matter of valuable earning power is evident from the monthly and annual statements of recent years.

Cotton had a violent break on the government report indicating a crop of 15,810,000 against 15,166,000 two weeks ago, 15,248,000 a month ago and 15,321,000 six weeks ago. Trade estimates were from 15,200,000 to 15,300,000.

BROKERS' TRIALS SET FOR OCTOBER

More than 30 Atlanta brokers indicted on misdemeanor charges in connection with the alleged operation of their respective business concerns as "bucket shops," will face juries in the criminal divisions of Fulton superior court during the early part of October.

This became known Thursday when Solicitor General John A. Boykin stated that he and attaches in his office were devoting their attention to preparation of the cases against the Atlanta brokers. It is probable that the calendar of the criminal division for the week beginning October 3 will be devoted entirely to these cases.

Each indictment sets out three counts, namely that the accused maintained a business for the purpose commonly called 'dealing in futures on margin'; that the brokers acted as agents and brokers for principals outside of the state of Georgia in making contracts and agreements called dealing in futures on margin, and that the defendants maintained gaming houses.

Solicitor Boykin inaugurated his crusade against alleged "bucket shops" in the latter part of 1924, more than a score of brokers being indicted in November of that year. A temporary injunction restraining the solicitor from prosecuting the cases until a hearing could be held in the supreme court was granted. The supreme court ruled that the defendants named in the indictments were subject to prosecution if the allegations of the solicitor were true.

Shortly after the decision of the supreme court was handed down, names of several other brokers, who, according to the solicitor, "had taken advantage of the injunction which was pending in the supreme court," were presented to the Fulton county grand jury and additional indictments were returned.

New York, September 23.—(By The Associated Press.)—Stock prices made irregular recovery from an earlier period of unsettlement today when the call money rate was lowered from 5 1-2 to 5 per cent. Wall street, which has been greatly concerned over the credit situation, construed cheaper call money as an indication that no change would be made today in the rediscount rate of the New York Federal Reserve bank, and the surmise was correct as directors of the bank met after the close of the market and decided to maintain the 4 per cent rate for at least another week.

Chief speculative interest of the day, however, centered in the cotton market which broke $6.50 a bale to the lowest price in years on publication of a government estimate of nearly 16,000,000 bales. Other commodities showed little change, wheat and rubber advancing slightly.

Chesapeake & Ohio common stock was the outstanding individual feature in the stock market soaring 9 points to a record high for all time at 178. "Nickel Plate" common soared nearly 7 points to a new record top at 204 1-2.

Little progress was made by recent industrial favorites. U. S. Steel common closed fractionally higher at 145 5-8, but General Motors and Allied Chemical lost ground. Pools were again active in a number of specialties, with some of the best gains being recorded by such stocks as advance Rumely, Baldwin, By-Products Coke, Chrysler, Consolidated Cigar, Consolidated Gas, General Asphalt, Lambert Co., Shubert Theaters, Sterling Products and Texas Gulf Sulphur.

Union Oil of California was marked up to 58 5-8 on unconfirmed merger rumors and then broke to 54 5-8, for a small fractional loss.

Outside of the Van Sweringen group, little interest developed in the rails although the publication of additional August earnings statements by class 1 carriers furnished cumulative evidence of current prosperity.

Call money renewed at 5 1-2 per cent, but was lowered to 5 in the early afternoon when funds reached the market in large volume. Time money and Commercial Paper rates held steady.

Except for a further decline in silver which carried the Chinese exchanges to the lowest level in years, there was little interest manifested in the the foreign exchanges. Demand sterling held steady around $4.85 and French francs yielded slightly to around 2.77 cents. Italian lire broke 5 points to 3.66 cents but the changes were nominal.

Weekly Cotton Letter.

New York, September 23.—From a cotton price viewpoint developments during the past week have been both interesting and important. The tropical storm held possibilities of great destruction to the crop as so much of the fiber is open in the fields. However, to judge from our reports, damage was confined to south Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi and will not be of sufficient consequence to seriously affect the size of the total production. It seems probable that grades will be unfavorably affected over an important area. However, the question of grades does not appear at the moment as of particular interest to investors. Our reports from various textile centers have been of greatly restricted purchasing owing to larger crop prophesies and fear that government estimates might be in revelation of a yield far exceeding the world's probable requirements. An interesting feature through entire season has been the attitude of cotton buyers who, since the large acreage became first known are stated to have been extraordinarily conservative purchasers. If that be true then an unusually large purchasing power exists which in due time must inevitably become operative. An interesting development of the week has been the widely divergent views regarding the crop prospect for the state of Texas. An important daily paper of Dallas gives as the result of their survey an estimate of 4,168,000 bales. There are other observers including the bureau at Washington who see in the Texas prospect the likelihood of one million bales above that figure. Estimating a cotton crop prospect is at best an inaccurate procedure and that honest observers vary so widely is not surprising, at least to those intimately acquainted with the plant. Over night developments may change the entire prospect and at same time, with cotton open in the fields, storms may not only lower quality, but reduce quantity. Be that as future developments shall determine, the government estimate as issued on Thursday of this week came as an almost unbelievable surprise to nearly all, showed that spinners position to have been most fortunately taken. Though the ginning figures were materially under the record of last year yet, the yield prospects is so ample, it seems extremely likely that all else will be disregarded. Accepting the government estimate as an accurate portrayal of harvest probabilities compels one to reach most pessimistic opinions regarding new crop values. In all probability users of cotton will feel that theirs is the dictating position for present at least and that owners of the fiber must make repeated overtures to secure purchasers for their holdings. Just what price will discount the planters temerity in planting as they did this year, must be determined. That the price is already on a distinctly punitive basis we think is a fact. That further declines must be witnessed seems probably before investment purchasing shall become a factor or spinners will be inclined to secure their requirements in any volume.

TRADING SLUMPS ON CURB MARKET

New York, September 23.—(AP)—Indecisive price movements characterized today's curb market, with trading showing a marked falling off in volume. Although cheaper call money rates helped to revive waning bullish enthusiasm in a few issues, the buying lacked vigor and apparently failed to attract an outside public interest.

Oils were sluggish despite the attempt to revive interest in that group by staging bullish demonstrations in a few issues on the "big board." Gulf advanced nearly 3 points to a new high at 93 7-8, but most of the other popular issues closed unchanged or lost ground.

Insurance company stocks were weak. Baking shares were under pressure, General Baking A and United Biscuit each losing about a point.

Certificates of the Madison Square Garden corporation, which shares in the profits of the Dempsey-Tunney fight, were fairly active around $15.

Except for the renewed strength of American Gas and Electric, which touched a new 1926 high at 109, and a point gain in United Gas Improvement, there was little interest in the public utilities.

Dupont (new stock) advanced to within a fraction of its high price.

Coffee.

New York, September 23.—Coffee, spot easy. Continued light demand. Rio No. 7, 17 1-16; Santos No. 4, 21½. Futures easy, September 16.15; December 16.26.

Sugar.

New York, September 23.—As no sales were reported in local raw sugar early today, prices were unchanged at 4.52 for Cuban, duty paid.

After ruling steady on renewed covering and trade buying, raw futures broke under heavy liquidating or realizing, and at midday prices were 2 to 6 points net lower. September showed the maximum loss, due to the issuance of 68 notices. Selling was apparently inspired by unconfirmed reports that while the start of the new Cuban crop would be delayed, there would be no curtailment of production.

Refined was unchanged at 5.80@5.90 for fine granulated, with continued good inquiry reported.

PROGRESS

NOT quite two years ago, in November, 1924, the Mortgage Guarantee Company of America consummated its first loan. During that first month of operation, the Company made mortgage loans totaling $30,000. . . . . In front of us are the records for the past three months—June, July and August, 1926. They average more than $400,000 of first mortgage loans per month!

Progress! Progress such as this—an increase in volume nearly fourteen-fold—is striking recognition of a popular and sound policy. It bespeaks a management that is at once aggressive and conservative. It is indicative of an efficient and experienced personnel.

A Southern Institution Conceived for Permanence

Organized in Atlanta, the main offices of the Mortgage Guarantee Company of America continue here, although its loan operations now include the principal cities of Georgia, Alabama, Texas and South Carolina—with client-investors in no less than 23 different states and one foreign country.

Approximately $5,000,000 is now outstanding in our first mortgage loans. Yet there has never been a single foreclosure, nor is there one under way! We have never loaned to exceed 60% on any property—the average is considerably less. This conservative margin of safety is reinforced by the time-tested practice of amortization.

Unconditionally Guaranteed by Assets in Excess of $37,000,000

Our first mortgage loans (usually on owner-occupied residences) are offered investors in the form of Guaranteed 5½% First Mortgage Participation Certificates. Payment of principal and interest is unconditionally guaranteed by this Company and by the National Surety Company, the world's largest surety company—representing combined assets of more than $37,000,000.

The South's fastest growing mortgage institution pledges its continued efforts to the upbuilding of this section, and welcomes inquiries both from investors and from those who wish to negotiate loans.

CANDLER BUILDING, ATLANTA

Associated Gas and Electric System

Founded in 1852

The First Dynamo Built in the United States

In 1875, William Anthony and George Moler, professors in Cornell University, built the first electric dynamo in this country. It provided electricity for two arc lights on the Cornell campus.

The invention of the dynamo represented one of the great pioneer forward steps in the electric industry. It made possible the generation of electricity continuously in large quantities.

Ithaca, New York, the home of Cornell University, is served by the oldest property of the Associated System—gas since 1852 and electricity since 1888.

Total bond sales (par value) $7,329,000.

New York, September 23.—(AP)—The main trend of bond prices today was toward lower levels, but enough buying support was marshaled for a few issues to prevent the decline from gaining much headway. Easier money rates early in the day foreshadowed the retention of the 4 per cent federal reserve rediscount rate but this development failed to stimulate trading.

Chief investment interest centered in arrangements for new German financing. The $24,000,000 loan for the Siemens electrical group of Germany, representing the joint obligations of Siemens and Halske and Siemens-Schukertwerke, will be placed on the market tomorrow by Dillon, Read & Co.

Half of a $20,000,000 bond issue for the Free State and the City of Hamburg will be distributed here within a week or two by New York bankers following the flotation of the first installment in London.

The foreign bond section displayed a steadier tone today as profit-taking ran its course.

Sugar and oil company obligations were the most active features of the domestic list, but failed to follow a uniform trend. Warner and Cuba Cane issues were moderately higher, while Skelly Oil 6 1-2s rallied 2 points. Granby Mining 7s and Bethlehem Steel 5 1-2s fell back about a point each.

Dry Goods.

New York, September 23.—Cotton goods markets were unsettled today by the government report on cotton yield. Gray goods prices were easier. Finished goods were bought steadily for prompt shipment. Raw silk was bought moderately. Velvets in silks are being cut up quite freely in some quarters for immediate shipment and cutters are using more materials for coatings. Burlap markets were firmer in Calcutta and rose here from 5 to 10 points. Wool markets were steady, a fair amount of business being placed by mills. There was active demand for women's coats and coatings for immediate use. Yarns were easier.

Huge Cotton Crop Shown In Government's Figures

Washington, September 23.—A cotton crop of 15,810,000 bales was indicated by the crop reporting board of the department of agriculture Thursday, a condition of 59.5 per cent of normal, as of September 16.

An approximate yield of 160 pounds of lint cotton per acre was estimated for the 47,207,000 acres for harvest in 1926.

The census report showed that 2,511,317 running bales, counting round as half bales, were ginned from the crop of 1926 prior to September 16, compared with 4,282,066 for 1925 and 2,665,793 for 1924.

Following shows the condition of the crop on September 16, September 1, August 16, together with condition on September 1, 1925, indicated crop as of September 16, 1926, yield per acre, acreage and actual crop last year:

New York, September 23.—(AP)—A decline of over 1 1-4 cents a pound in the cotton market today followed publication of the government's crop report. December contracts sold off to 14.55, a decline of 126 points from the close yesterday and 370 points from the high price of September 8. There was some trade buying and a good deal of covering on the decline, but last prices were within 15 or 20 points of the lowest. December closing at 14.65. The market closed easy and irregular at net losses of 112 to 124 points.

The market was fairly active, but fluctuated within a comparatively narrow range during earlier trading.

The government report placing the condition at 59.5 and the indicated yield at 15,810,000 bales evidently was far above expectations, being higher than any of the private mid-month reports and nearly 700,000 bales above the average of the private figures. As a result there was heavy general selling when the market reopened after the usual 20 minutes' interval for the reception of the figures, and remained under pressure the balance of the day.

The census ginning figures of 2,511,317 seemed light compared with the ginnings of 4,282,086 to the same time last year, but failed to bring in any buying of consequence in the face of the big crop indication and the market was weak and unsettled on the break to 14.34 for October and 14.62 for January, representing net declines of 126 to 132 points on active positions. Some trade buying was reported on scale down orders, while there was naturally a great deal of profit taking by shorts, but bearish sentiment created by the increased crop estimate was still much in evidence at the close.

Exports today 33,287, making 870,610 so far this season. Port receipts 62,192. U. S. port stocks 980,705.

SPOTS IN NEW YORK.

New York, September 23.—(AP)—Cotton spot quiet; middling 15.05.

GENERAL SELLING AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, September 23.—(AP)—The cotton market today experienced probably the most active session of the season, due to the heavy liquidation and general selling which followed the issue by the government of a surprisingly large indicated crop total. The trade had been looking for a larger crop estimate than that issued on September 8 based on conditions existing September 1, and prices had accordingly declined considerably during the last week.

When the indicated crop of 15,810,000 bales, based on a condition of 59.9, was made public prices slumped at once 85 to 90 points from the levels that prevailed immediately before the bureau report was issued. This brought the price level down 101 to 108 points from the highs of the morning. Further liquidation during the period after mid-session caused a drop to levels 140 to 142 points below the early highs or a loss of $7 a bale. There was a rally of about 20 points in the late trading on profit-taking by shorts and the close showed net losses for the day of 110 to 116 points.

Before the government report was issued, October was trading at 15.58, December at 15.67 and January at 15.80. Immediately after the report was issued October traded down to 14.6;, December to 14.90 and January to 14.95 or 85 to 90 points decline and 101 to 103 points under the highs of the morning.

The market after a slight rally weakened again and made the lows to the day in the early afternoon at 14.31 for October, 14.50 for December and 14.56 for January or 140 to 142 points below the highs. There was a rally of about 20 points near the end. The census bureau made total ginnings to September 16, 2,511,317 bales. Exports for the day totaled 33,287 bales.

SPOTS IN NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, September 23.—(AP)—Spot cotton closed steady 118 points down. Sales 20,061. Low middling 11.48; middling 14.48; good middling 14.93. Receipts 11,697; stock 191,072.

GEORGIA COTTON CROP REPORT

A cotton crop of 1,169,000 bales (500 pounds gross weight) is indicated for Georgia in the official report released today through the Georgia Cooperative Corporation reporting service. This report, which relates to September 16, places condition of the crop at 56 per cent of normal, indicating an average yield per acre of about 142 pounds.

The average yield per acre in 1925 was 155 pounds and in 1924, 157 pounds. Total production in 1925 was 1,164,000 bales and in 1924, 1,004,000 bales. Acreage for harvest this year is about 9 per cent greater than the 1925 acreage and 29 per cent greater than in 1924.

Conditions during the period from September 1 to 16 were quite favorable for development of the late crop, resulting in further recovery from lateness and hopper damage in the northern half of the state. The improvement in that section, with somewhat better yields being realized in the southern territory than were expected two weeks ago resulted in about 3 per cent increase in the indicated crop since September 1.

Offsetting to some extent the favorable developments during the period, was the presence of the leaf worm in the northern third of the state. While on September 16 the pest was present in a large percentage of the fields, serious damage had occurred only in widely scattered localities. At that time the extent of probable loss from this source was uncertain, being largely dependent upon the extent of poisoning and the degree of infestation after that date. Some growers were poisoning with calcium arsenate and, where used, the treatment was usually proving effective.

Picking and ginning are progressing rapidly in the southern half of the state where most of the cotton is open. Picking has just started in the northern territory.

RAW SUGAR SETS NEW HIGH RECORD

New York, September 23.—(AP)—Another new high record for the season was established in the raw sugar market. Trading was not very active, however, and the only sale reported was 15,000 bags of Cuban for October shipment to a local refiner at 4.55 duty paid.

Raw sugar futures broke 4 to 7 points under heavy liquidation for realizing, promoted by unconfirmed reports that the new Cuban crop would not be curtailed. A rally followed and the close was 2 to 3 points net lower. Approximate sales, 57,000 tons. December closed 2.82; January 2.84, March 2.77, May 2.85, July 2.93.

The refined sugar market was unchanged at 5.80 to 5.90 for fine granulated.

Cottonseed Oil.

New York, September 23.—After an early advance of 2 to 7 points on covering on the steadiness in lard and grain, cottonseed oil broke severely today under general liquidation and stop-loss selling, induced by the bearish government report on cotton and easier crude markets.

Closing prices were near the lowest and at net losses of 43 to 85 points. September sold at 9.30 and October at 9.50, both new lows for the season. Sales 22,100 barrels. Tenders, 700 barrels. Prime crude 8.00 bid; prime summer yellow spot 9.10@10.25. September closed 9.40; October 9.60; December 9.40; January 9.45; March 9.60.

New Orleans, September 23.—Cottonseed oil closed quiet: prime summer yellow 9.65; prime crude 8.00. September 8.90; October 8.40; November and December 8.50; January, February, March and April 8.75.

A Better Gasoline has swept the country!

The American motoring public has given an unprecedented country-wide endorsement of The Texas Company's latest motor product.

Daily, more and more of the new and better Texaco is flowing into the tanks of motorists. Car owners and drivers are enthusiastic. Reports of increased mileage are universal. Texaco dealers everywhere report increased sales.

Such a marked public expression of approval could only come from the appreciation of noticeably better results attained in the motor.

The new and better Texaco is nationally distributed, nationally demanded. Wherever you go, it is always uniform.

WET or DRY

A wet gas, as it would appear in the manifold, is a mixture of gasoline vapor with minute liquid gasoline globules which form a wet film at the manifold bends and enrich certain cylinders at the expense of others.

A dry gas, the new Texaco, vaporizes at a lower temperature than others on the market and forms a perfect dry motor fuel which distributes evenly and gives a smooth flow of power to every cylinder.

The new and better Texaco forms a dry gas!

The difference in gasolines is largely one of wetness and dryness. Texaco forms a dry gas—a perfect mixture of vapor and air at ordinary engine temperatures. It is a difference in volatility, in the boiling point, end point and distillation. The new Texaco is better throughout the whole range of distillation.

Results are just as remarkable as its qualities. The new Texaco insures far better manifold distribution and a livelier, more responsive engine, an easier start, quicker pick-up and smoother operation. You will notice the better hill work and freedom from knocking. The new Texaco has exceptional anti-knock qualities—attained without the addition of dopes or chemicals.

Carburetor adjustment is not imperative—you will get better results in any event, but still better if adjusted to the lean mixture that the new and better Texaco makes possible.

THE TEXAS COMPANY, U. S. A., Texaco Petroleum Products

The NEW and BETTER TEXACO FORMS A DRY GAS

Every Texaco pump now dispenses the new and better Texaco Gasoline.

Miss Adams Weds Mr. Ross At Beautiful Church Ceremony

The marriage of Miss Maxine Adams and John Bennett Ross was solemnized Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at the All Saints' Episcopal church before an assemblage of relatives and friends. The Rev. Dr. W. W. Memminger, rector of the church, performed the ceremony, and preceding the marriage service William Arnaud, church organist, rendered an appropriate program of music. Mrs. J. W. Maden sang "Oh Perfect Love" prior to the entrance of the bridal party.

A profusion of palms, ferns and foliage plants banked the altar, interspersed with floor baskets of orchid-shaded dahlias. Huge Cathedral candelabra holding slender burning tapers were arranged at intervals, the rays shedding a soft light over the beautiful scene. The pews reserved for the families were marked by clusters of orchid-shaded dahlias tied with wide satin ribbons to match. Along the chancel rail smilax was gracefully draped and caught at intervals with bouquets of lovely dahlias in the lavender tints.

Bridal Party.

The bridesmaids descended the long aisles in pairs, alternating with the groomsmen, who also entered in pairs. The gowns of the bridesmaids were fashioned alike in the period style. They were modeled of chiffon and veiled flesh-colored satin. Large bows of satin to match the costumes were caught at the back waistline, the ends extending to the bottom of the skirts which touched the ankles at the back. Silver thread lace trimmed the close-fitting bodices and was also introduced on the skirts. They carried shower bouquets of pink roses and swainsona tied with ribbons to match their gowns.

Misses Robert Harbour and Marion Phillips wore orchid-shaded gowns. Miss Alice Carmichael and Miss Mildred Bawsel were gowned in delicate green. The maid of honor, Miss Gladys McClelland, wore a gown fashioned similar to the bridesmaids in an exquisite apricot shade. She carried a bouquet of golden Ophelia roses showered with valley lillies. Little Misses Courtney McFayden and Josephine Aline McDougald were the flower girls and they wore the daintiest of frocks made of shell pink chiffon. They carried Marie Antoinette baskets filled with pink sweet peas and pink roses. The groomsmen included Henry Bookout, James Whitfield, Peter Preer, of Tuskegee, Ala., and Fred Long, of Savannah.

Beautiful Bride.

The beautiful young bride entered with her father, William Hunter Adams, by whom she was given in marriage. They were joined at the altar by the groom and his best man, William Francis Rice, of Birmingham, Ala. The bride's exquisite beauty was enhanced by her wedding gown of ivory white satin fashioned along old-fashioned lines. Chantilly lace formed a flounce at the bottom of the skirt, being attached to the skirt by an embroidery of pearls and rhinestones. A beautiful beaded design, embroidered in these same pretty beads, trimmed the back and front part of the close fitting bodice. The court train of satin hung gracefully from the shoulders where it was held by ornaments of pearls and rhinestones. A double veil effect of tulle and rose-point lace covered the entire train and was held to the head by a coronet of orange blossoms and rose point lace. She carried a shower bouquet of orchids and valley lilies.

Reception Follows.

Following the marriage service, Mr. and Mrs. Adams, the bride's parents entertained members of the bridal party and relatives at a reception at at their home on North Moreland avenue. Mrs. Adams wore a handsome gown of gold lace combined with orchid shaded velvet and her shoulder bouquet was of Ophelia roses and valley lilies.

Mrs. J. P. Billups, the groom's mother, was gowned in black lace veiling white satin and she wore a shoulder bouquet of orchids and valley lilies.

Mrs. Louis Bell, of Boston, Mass., the groom's sister, wore a creation of white satin trimmed with Chantilly lace.

Mrs. B. M. McFayden, another sister of the groom, was gowned in green crepe trimmed with black and gold appliqued flowers.

Mrs. John Patterson, of Montgomery, Ala., was gowned in white chiffon lavishly beaded in crystals.

Punch was served by Misses Mary McCord, Maynor Fluker and Grace Adams, and Miss Mary Buchanan kept the bride's book.

The reception rooms of the home were elaborately decorated with early fall flowers, the color of lavender, pink and white predominating. Beautiful dahlias in these shades were arranged on the mantels, bookcases and tables. Smilar, palms and green foliage plants adorned the corners of the rooms and were banked against the fire places and on the inclosed porches where punch was served.

Bride's Table.

The bride's table was ornamented in the center by a huge cake embossed in pink and lavender flowers, the cake resting on a plateau of pink and lavender dahlias, the outer edge of the plateau fringed with swainsona.

During the evening Mr. Ross and his bride left for a motor trip to North Carolina, returning later to Tuskegee, Ala., where they will reside. Mrs. Ross wore a traveling costume of Valencia blue frost crepe trimmed with silver braid. Her hat was a smart model in the same shade of blue, also trimmed in silver braid.

Distinctive Furniture At Low Prices Developing Big Patronage at Philibosian's

Have Sold Furniture, Rugs and Draperies to Many of Atlanta's Most Prominent Homes.

Gradually the public is being "sold" on the idea of paying cash for furniture, rugs and draperies and nothing is selling them like a visit to the beautiful store of Stephen Philibosian, Inc., at 581 Peachtree street.

Here one sees the very latest in furniture design, beautiful pieces that would grace any fine home, and yet prices that are amazingly low.

Undoubtedly Stephen Philibosian is making good his promise to the public to sell at lower prices by selling for cash.

When the cash policy was first announced many people were emphatic in their belief that "it couldn't be done," and those who have not actually been to the store and seen the real quality merchandise at amazingly low prices may yet wonder why people will pay all cash for such important items as furniture and rugs.

"The only way we can convince people that we are actually doing everything we claim is to show them through our store; show them the merchandise and the prices that are marked in plain figures," says Stephen Philibosian.

"People who have come to our store and have seen for themselves the difference in price of this cash store and the store that sells on terms, needs no additional argument to convince them of the wisdom of paying all cash for furniture and household furnishings.

Another big factor in the development of business for Stephen Philibosian, Inc., is the staff of expert salesmen who are rendering the kind of service the public wants and has a right to expect from such a firm.

Every salesman in the employ of Stephen Philibosian, Inc., is long experienced in the distribution of this class of merchandise, and each of the Philibosian salesmen has a large following, who depend upon them for assistance in the selection of such merchandise.

During the last few weeks there have been customers from a number of different cities in several different states who, having heard of the remarkably low prices of this firm have come from a distance to Stephen Philibosian, Inc., to make their purchases.

Such widespread approval, combined with the ever growing local patronage, is conclusive proof that the firm of Stephen Philibosian is here to stay and that the cash policy of this firm is a sound business principle.—(adv.)

These few lines are to tell you this store has reached the 44th milestone on life's highway.

And, as has been the custom since this business was founded, we are going to celebrate this Anniversary with a sale—the most truly remarkable sale in all our history.

Maudlin type waving of the sort that makes no attempt at sincerity has no place here. We choose to be judged by our deeds — and Sunday's newspapers will tell you, in detail, of our plans for this sale—and the prices will speak louder than all the words ever used, of our determination to make this event one that will live long in the annals of local merchandising.

So we say truthfully:

No more, no less . . . but Quaker Oats has the flavor

THE difference in breakfast oats is in their flavor. The price mostly is the same.

Millions demand the Quaker brand because of its toasty, wonderful flavor. For flavor is the important point in food.

Some 50 years were spent perfecting that famous Quaker flavor. Once you taste it, you are spoiled for ordinary oats.

Quaker milling, too, retains much of the "bulk" of oats. And that makes laxatives less often needed. Protein, carbohydrates and vitamines and "bulk" are thus combined to make Quaker Oats an excellently balanced ration.

Get Quick Quaker (cooks in 3 to 5 minutes) or Quaker Oats today at your grocer. See how much finer tomorrow's breakfast will be than today's.

Holder Tells Audience He Would Remove Present State Bank Superintendent

Candidate for Governor Says He Would Also Remove James H. Dozier, Tax Commissioner.

Franklin, Ga., September 23.—(Special.)—"Georgia will have a new superintendent of banks if I am elected governor and there will be changes in the banking laws that will protect the people against such losses as they have suffered recently," declared John N. Holder, candidate for governor, in his speech here Tuesday to the voters of Heard county.

"And if I am elected governor not only will T. R. Bennett be removed from his place as state bank superintendent, but Jim Dozier, Governor Walker's former campaign manager and present political lieutenant, will be ousted from his job as revenue commissioner and also from his sideline job as liquidating agent for broken banks. He will cease to draw large fees from these defunct banks which should go into the pockets of the depositors and stockholders.

"It's a fine come to pass that a governor of Georgia and his retinue of officeholders appointed by him should be so busy plotting and scheming to elect their gubernatorial candidate that the governor cannot take the time to hear nor heed a recommendation of a grand jury that he remove from office the state superintendent of banks because of his negligence in failing to provide safeguards for the depositors in the big chain of banks which recently went to the wall.

"Talk about political machines, Governor Clifford Walker, through the banking department, headed by his appointee, T. R. Bennett; the game and fish department headed by his appointee, Pete Twitty; the tax department headed by his appointee, John Vandiver; the revenue department headed by his appointee, Jim Dozier, and through the governor's offices where judges, solicitors, trustees of state institutions and innumerable others are appointed, is operating the greatest political machine ever seen in this state and he is operating it at its highest possible speed in behalf of Dr. Hardman.

Charges Prejudice.

"In the campaign prior to the recent primary, the charge of machine politics found a popular response. It was then that Dr. Hardman and others, casting about for an issue against me that would divert attention from the real issue of this campaign—state bonds or no state bonds—seized on the slogan of machine politics. They charged then and they are continuing to charge that I am the boss of a political machine and that I was in a combination with a political machine headed by Agricultural Commissioner J. J. Brown. They know that both these charges are lies, but what does that matter if they can create prejudice against me and stop the tide of anti-bond sentiment.

"Dr. Hardman and others opposing me are going about the state saying that if I am elected governor I will appoint J. J. Brown chairman of the state highway board. That is just another lie. If I am elected I will not appoint Mr. Brown. Such a thought has never entered my head.

"But while we are on this subject of machine politics and appointments of a chairman for the highway board I desire to cite to your attention the feverish energy with which Governor Walker's statehouse machine, aided and abetted by Editor W. T. Anderson, of The Macon Telegraph, and Julian Harris, of The Columbus Enquirer-Sun, is sponsoring the candidacy of Dr. Hardman. And I would like for Dr. Hardman to give a categorical answer to the question whether he will appoint Governor Walker chairman of the state highway board in the event of his election.

Called Exploiter of Helpless.

"Dr. Hardman's hypocrisy is obvious to everyone. The Pharisees, who in olden days sat in the high places, would have to take a back seat if they were living today. Dr. Hardman goes about posing as the great millionaire humanitarian and philanthropist when, as a matter of fact, he has feathered his own nest at the expense of his fellow men, oftentimes at the expense of his unfortunate and helpless fellow men.

"All over this state the people are asking the question: 'If Dr. Hardman is such a wonderful business man and such a great humanitarian, why is it that the people of his own county voted against him and voted for Holder?' They are construing the vote of the people of Jackson, the county in which Dr. Hardman and I both live, as a vote of confidence for me and a lack of confidence in Dr. Hardman.

"People who do not know either of us are asking themselves if they had not better let the people of Jackson county, who know us both, decide between us for them.

"Everywhere he goes Dr. Hardman is being told that the people are asking these questions and that the fact that I carried Jackson county is cutting in on him. He has felt the necessity of explaining it in some way, and so he is telling the people that the reason he lost Jackson and I carried it is because in Jefferson, my home town, they would not allow him to have a representative among the election managers.

Hardman Represented.

"That is just another lie. I hold in my hand an affidavit that shows Dr. Hardman is at his old habit of disregarding the truth when the truth stands in his way. Listen to this affidavit:

"'Georgia, Jackson County.

"'Personally appeared before me, the undersigned, an officer duly authorized to administer oaths, J. E. Tribble, who first being duly sworn, deposes and upon oath says that he is district committeeman of Jefferson district, Jackson county, the home of John N. Holder, and as committeeman he had charge of holding the election on the 8th day of September, 1926, and selected the other managers and all the clerks that took part in holding said election.

"'Deponent says that he was against John N. Holder and for Dr. L. G. Hardman for governor, and voted for Dr. Hardman. Deponent says that Dr. L. G. Hardman was represented by deponent and any and all charges that Dr. L. G. Hardman did not get a fair deal in Jefferson district are absolutely false and unfounded.

"'J. E. TRIBBLE.

"'Sworn to and subscribed before me, this, the 13th day of September, 1926.

"'C. W. DICKSON,

"'Ordinary.'

"Now doesn't that affidavit show conclusively that Dr. Hardman deliberately misrepresented the facts?

"Just watch the line up: You will find that all the reactionary politicians of the statehouse machine, captained by Governor Walker and engineered by Editor Anderson and Editor Harris, as well as all the probond leaders, are supporting Hardman and viciously fighting me.

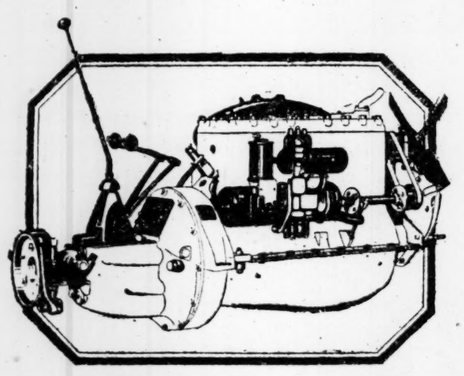

"George Carswell, whose candidacy for governor was fully and decisively adjudicated in the first primary and who ran a poor third, bobs up again in the newspapers today with a repetition of all the slanders which he and his master, the editor of the Macon Telegraph broadcast in the first campaign. Just how much impression George made upon the voters with these charges against me is shown by the way the voters voted against George.

Trade With Carswell.

"George held a conference in Atlanta at the Henry Grady hotel a few days ago with Dr. Hardman, and it is reported and generally believed that at that conference he entered into a trade to support Dr. Hardman and that the philanthropic doctor agreed after due deliberation to fix George up for the first campaign and the second too. No wonder George repeats his slanders. I expect to see him out on the stump for Dr. Hardman within a few days.

"Almost in the very beginning of his latest tirade against me George makes statements that on the face of them are false and the falseness of which indicate the character of his subsequent statements. He says at the mileage hearings throughout the state I used the state's funds to hire brass bands and special trains. That is as untrue as it is ridiculous. Nobody believes that statement.

"He repeats the outrageous lie charging that I drew hundreds of dollars from the highway department treasury and insinuates that I used the money to influence the legislature to pass a midnight bill. All of these charges have been investigated and passed upon by the courts and by a special committee of the state senate which was composed of men of the highest character and of which committee Senator Hutchinson, who was not friendly to me and who was the author of the resolution to investigate charges against me, was made the chairman. All these investigations resulted in my vindication."

NEW BEAUTY

—but traditional Studebaker Stamina

BEAUTY and refinement in the new Studebaker Custom cars has subtracted nothing from their efficiency nor added anything to their cost.

For beneath the outward beauty of these custom creations, is the same traditional stamina which has enabled Studebaker to establish some of the world's most notable records for endurance.

This speed and durability recently enabled a Studebaker Big Six to cut 16 hours and 25 minutes off the best previous transcontinental automobile record, under the most adverse weather conditions — made Studebaker the victor in the 1925 Russian endurance trials — broke the Trans-Australian record in 1924!

The brilliant performance of Studebaker cars is due to the quiet Studebaker L-head motors. Marked freedom from vibration comes through complete machining and dynamic balancing of the big Studebaker crankshaft. Long life and endurance come through costly alloy steels, better materials of every kind and the finest workmanship.

For quality that starts with the lustrous finish and goes clear through to the chassis, the new Studebaker Custom Sedans have no equal. See them and ride in them. Then you will know.

GIPSY SMITH, JR., TO PREACH SUNDAY AT LOCAL CHURCH

Gipsy Smith, Jr., probably the best-known evangelist in the south, will be in Atlanta for the morning service at Peachtree Road Presbyterian church Sunday. Announcement is made to this effect by M. L. Thrower, who for some time has been trying to perfect arrangements which will enable the people of Atlanta to hear Mr. Smith.

The evangelist has never conducted a campaign in Atlanta, but his work in Mississippi several years ago resulted in his being engaged by a group of men to put on a series of campaigns through the state. His campaign in Augusta and later at Savannah, Macon and Rome are regarded as most effective. He is in the midst of a campaign now in Griffin, which made it possible for him to come up to Atlanta for this one service.

There are many laymen's evangelistic clubs throughout the south bearing his name, while in Mississippi scores of "flying squadrons" were organized under the influence of his meetings and the enthusiastic and effective work of these men is known all over the south.

WHIPPET GOES 57.6 MILES PER GALLON

H. M. VanDevender, of The Constitution, drove a Whippet stock sedan 57.6 miles on a gallon of gasoline during the Willys-Overland field trial on Wednesday.

The average for all contestants participating during the day was 49.3 miles on a gallon.

On Monday, R. J. Boston drove 51.2 miles on a gallon and on Tuesday, T. C. Graham, of 4 Maddox drive, secured 53.6 miles. All contestants are amazed at this tremendous gasoline mileage and with Mr. Van Devender's new record, the keenest competition is expected on the tests during the remainder of the week.

The contest is open to all automobile drivers—the prize going daily to the one making the greatest mileage on a pint of gasoline. No restrictions are placed on the driver other than the ordinary restrictions of traffic. The same person can make as many tests as he desires, but only one prize will be awarded to any one individual.

The Whippet is proving its flexibility by making a 12-hour daily high gear run in traffic. All starts from traffic stops are being made without change of gears. This car will be seen on the streets throughout the remainder of the week.

SEABOARD RESTORES SERVICE TO FLORIDA

Norfolk, Va., September 23.—"The passenger department of the Seaboard general offices, Norfolk, Va., announce Thursday a complete restoration of its Florida service, all through trains from the east destined to West Palm Beach, bus connection to Miami to central Florida, and also to Sarasota, Tampa and St. Petersburg, are operating on their usual schedules.

"It is also announced restoration of its service to Gasparilla today, to South Buca Grande by Sunday, September 26 at the latest, and service back to normalcy between Sarasota and Venice within the next 48 hours. However, due to storm conditions between Crestview and Pensacola through trains 43 and 44 operating between Jacksonville and New Orleans, have been temporarily annulled, but trains 36, 37, 38 and 39 are operating on their usual schedules between Jacksonville and River Junction. The entire Seaboard system together with its organizations was immediately tendered to Governor Martin and to others in authority and the devastated area and all of their representatives regardless of department are keenly alive to the exigencies of the situation and working hand-in-hand continuously with the Red Cross and civic bodies with the view of seeing that all of those in distress particularly the women and children and those suffering from afflictions or sickness are rendered every possible attention regardless of its nature, officials said.

"The Seaboard also has offered the assistance of large organized lists of workmen who were busily engaged in building the Miami extension and is operating refugees' trains from all affected points as promptly and as frequently as necessary. One special with 400 refugees left West Palm Beach at 11:00 a. m. today and another special will be necessary Friday night," says J. W. Young, president of Hollywood, and chairman of the relief committee, these trains being in charge of and under the personal supervision of trained passenger representatives who are giving their particular attention to the handling of refugees en route and on arrival Jacksonville and other junction points, facilitating their prompt handling to final destination," it was said.

On account of urgent appeal sent out by American Red Cross and American Legion, West Palm Beach, Atlanta officials of the Seaboard are now raising money to relieve people in storm-devastated area, they report.

INSTALLMENT V.

NO OBJECT OF SYMPATHY.

In the telephone booth young Goddard was calling for Miss Maxwell. Up till the night of Norma's dance she had been merely a name to him and a strikingly pretty girl he had passed occasionally on the streets. Now that he knew her, had danced with her, and had met at close range her defiant and unhappy young eyes, he felt very sorry for her. In his mental vernacular, she was "up against it." She was "on the toboggan," and from all he had heard, she was due to strike the bottom of the slide with a bad crash. Yet she had not seemed at all like that sort of girl the night of the dance at Norma's. She had been merely young and inexperienced and pathetically happy. They had danced together twice, and she had danced very badly and had confessed that she knew almost nothing about dancing. Evidently she had made long strides since then.

Her voice came to him over the wire and he hastened to give her his message.

He hung up the receiver with a grin. The girl's voice sounded a little like the morning after. He suspected that she would look like the morning after, too. He was mighty sure she didn't want to bother about legal papers, and he rather admired the sporting spirit she had shown in making the appointment. Almost any other young thing who had danced till four in the morning, and then taken an impromptu bath, on a wager, in the fountain on her front lawn, and had followed the bath by motoring out to Kelly's roadhouse for breakfast, might easily feel somewhat faded now. As good measure she had thrown in a slight automobile collision on the way home, and she and the three friends with her were reported to have been badly shaken up. Incidentally, she had given the town a lot more to talk about. Poor little idiot! What a mess she was making of the fine adventure of life!

"I want to thank you again for taking me home that night——"

But the young person who greeted him at three o'clock that afternoon did not look at all like an object of sympathy. She was rather pale but she was charmingly dressed and she received him in a really beautiful room, brightened by chrysanthemums and with logs blazing in a huge fireplace. The outer world was in the grip of late November and a mild snowstorm was in progress. Goddard had made the three-mile run to the suburbs in an icy street car, and had then walked another half mile to the old Maxwell house, which sat far back in its grounds aloofly surveying its neighbors over a woodbine covered fieldstone wall. He liked comfort as much as any normal young man, and the contrast between this room and the outer world was pleasant. He threw his overcoat across the back of a chair and buoyantly approached the fire where the girl sat waiting for him. He had brought a fountain pen, and the transaction between them would be an affair of minutes only; but he inwardly admitted that she had given him a picture to carry away. She had the reputation of being a beauty, but he had not realized that she was so pretty. For the office visits she had worn a fur coat and one of those small, close fitting hats in which a woman is said to be both blind and deaf, and which so sadly limits the degree of visibility of her features. The night of the Davis party she had been very badly dressed. He remembered her hair, and today he saw it again—a lovely, boyish-bobbed, bronze-toned mass of hair, with lights in it; and her eyes—gray—no, green, really—and the sweetness of her mouth as she suddenly and unexpectedly smiled at him, nodding toward a big chair beside her.

"Sit down," she invited. "You really run the Hatch offices, don't you? I've seen you every time I've been there, and you are the only person who seems to do anything."

"I'm the only clerk," he sedately explained. "Naturally I show myself to clients as much as I can, with the idea of taking them away from the firm as soon as I'm admitted to the bar."

She smiled again.

"I know you are studying for the bar. Norma Davis told me. You and she are great friends, aren't you? She and I are friends, too, you know."

He met this with a conventional murmur to which she did not listen.

"I don't believe you will have much trouble in taking the clients away when the time comes," she went on. "The firm always seems asleep to me, though I must admit that Mr. Hatch woke up for a few minutes the other day. Does anyone but you really do anything?" she persisted.

"Oh, yes. Mr. Hatch eats, and Mr. Fuller adorns society, and Mr. Kimball spends a lot of time disapproving of them both. Kimball really works, though. There's always some one who has to, you know, to keep things going, and he's it in that firm. But Mr. Hatch is a big lawyer. He has one of the finest legal minds in the state when he wakes up, as you say, and his integrity is a Rock of Gibraltar. Of course he does wake up, too, when Kimball or the clients take things to him. But he's getting frightfully lazy."

Goddard listened to himself in amazement. This sort of thing wasn't at all up to the standard of loyalty he had set for himself. He was talking to the girl as intimately as if they were old friends. He had not said as much about the members of the firm to any of his associates. He smiled at himself. He was doing it simply to prolong the interview—to keep out of the wet, and to look at a pretty girl in a beautiful setting. How the big, paneled room became her! It was old Maxwell's library, of course. He remembered hearing that the late Horace's redeeming feature, if he had one, was a love of books. According to rumor, he had spent most of his time shut up in that library, and neither his wife nor his daughter had been permitted to cross the threshold during his presence there. What a devilish time this girl must have had!

Probably the reason she had stuck in his mind since the party was that her mother had died that night. The drama of it had hit him. The girl's one good time—her Cinderella outing—and that grim aftermath. When they telephoned for her, he had brought her home, and had lingered in the hall to see if there was anything more he could do—but there wasn't. She had come downstairs again to tell him. Poor kid!

As if she followed his thoughts, she spoke abruptly.

"I want to thank you again for bringing me home that night."

"Please don't. I was sorry I couldn't do more. I musn't forget to give you a message from the chief," he went on briskly, and added the summons for the next day, while she shrugged distastefully.

"I think I know what that means," she admitted.

Remembering his errand, Goddard took the packet of papers from an inside pocket and offered it to her, searching in another pocket for the elusive fountain pen as he did so. She ignored the papers.

"I hear from all sides," she said suddenly, "that you are the town's model young man. How does it feel to be so universally respected?"

The direct attack was so sudden that he winced. Then he turned his wide smile on her. He had the most likeable smile she had ever seen. When he was not smiling his face was too serious for his years, which, she decided, could not be more than twenty-three or twenty-four.

"Some one has been slandering me," he assured her.

"No, I believe it's the truth. If it were not, you wouldn't be such a pal of Judge Davis and of Norma."

He tried to divert her attention to a side issue.

"You and Norma are pals, too."

"We were. We aren't now—at least I'm told we're not. I often wondered why Norma didn't bring you here, on the rare occasions when she deigned to come herself. Now I understand. She wanted to keep you as you are—unspotted from the world."

"That's an awful thing to say to a fellow," he murmured.

"Is it? I'm sorry. I suppose I oughtn't to have said it, but the thought came and I'm getting a bad habit of saying anything I think. That's one of the advantages of being an outcast, you know. One can say anything—and one does. The frankness in my set is terrifying."

He looked at her soberly.

"You really oughn't to say you're an outcast. That's the sort of thing one mustn't even joke about."

She laughed delightedly.

"I've lost my wager," she cried. "Chad said I would, and he's usually right, even when he can't talk straight."

Tunney Upsets Dope and Beats Dempsey by Decision

Dempsey Transformed Into Pawing, Timid Second Rater, Loses

Tunney Discovers That Mauler is No Man-Eater and Proceeds to Pound Him Into Pulp—Champion Decisively Beaten.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Ringside, Sesqui-centeanial Stadium, Philadelphia, Pa., September 23.—With his face beaten into a bloody mask, Jack Dempsey passed the heavyweight championship of the world along to Gene Tunney tonight at the end of 10 strange rounds of fighting that began in a trickle of rain and wound up in a down-pour.

More than 130,000 frantic citizens stood in the rain, open-mouthed and able only to utter weird squawks as Dempsey tottered to his corner at the last bell with his left eye sealed shut and the entire left side of his face bulging like some horrible growth to plunge into the arms of his handlers in collapse. Tunney, unmarked, and with the same rather pained smile on his face that he wore when he entered the ring, turned to his people in his corner, dazed almost as badly as Dempsey by the unexpected ease with which he had beated the fellow who held the championship since the summer of 1919 under the awesome title of the man-killer.

It wasn't a man-killer that Gene Tunney fought but a timid, pawing second-rater, who might have lost to a Bartley Madden or a Charlie Weinert. The Dempsey who used to tear out of his corner at the clang of the first bell as though someone had set fire to his trunks, came out with his guard up and to the amazement of the greatest throng that ever saw a prize fight, leaped into a clinch with his arms at Tunney's waist.

Tunney, the instinctive counter-fighter, shrunk back into the angle of his corner as Dempsey walked at him, not the head-long Dempsey who flung himself at Luis Firpo, but a mincing Dempsey who crossed the ring with something of a William T. Tilden's gait in his stride and he didn't even offer a punch when he got there.

Inasmuch as Dempsey had not hit him on the way in, Tunney grabbed his arms in the clinch and discovered that he could handle this dark-browed fellow with the gauzy little patches of bandage glued to his eye-brows like horns. So Tunney parted Dempsey's arms and as they stepped away, he flipped in a right for the jaw that went straight to the mark. A tremor ran along Dempsey's frame as the right first drove home, but he pulled up and tossed a right to the jaw himself.

Without Force.

It was not the sort of punch you expected from a Dempsey though. It was the sort of right hand slap that you'd look for in a fight between Joe Stecssel and Sailor Marted, an incompetent, drifting clout, without force enough to trouble a middleweight. Then Jack Dempsey leaped in with a left hook to the jaw, the left hook that drove clear up to the wrist in the flabby middle of Luis Firpo and dropped him, sucking and moaning for breath in the ring at the Polo Grounds that wild night three years ago. The left hook clipped Tunney on the chin and he didn't even spin. And then Gene Tunney realized that although he might not be a killer himself he certainly had nothing to fear from Jack.

At that he took charge of the fight and went to work. If the whole story of this fight had to be summed up in a few excited words, it could be told in the frantic phrases of little fellow who sat, pop-eyed with excitement, in the press row, jabbering a story into the ear of a telegraph operator: "Tunney shot a left and a right to the jaw," the diminutive vilo man jabbered. "Dempsey tried a left to ed his way to sensational victories over Jess Willard, Georges Carpentier and Luis Firpo. Gone was the devastating punch, the furious aggressiveness that marked him as one of the most feared men in the ring.

Instead, he seemed in a daze from the start, unable at any time to sustain his attack for more than a few seconds. Occasionally, he connected with long left or right hooks to the head and body, but these no more than jarred the challenger temporarily. Always Tunney came back, punching with rights and lefts from the shoulder, rocking Dempsey's head with short but powerful blows.

It was Tunney's terrific right-hand blows to the head, chin and ribs that decided the battle. This blow, delivered like a ramrod, broke up Dempsey's rushes, opened cuts about his face and finally, in the last round, closed his left eye completely.

Dempsey was a sorry sight in the final round as Tunney, realizing victory and the goal of his fighting career was in his grasp, threw caution to the winds and lashed the champion about the ring. Gamely, Dempsey, weaving and bobbing, bored in, but he only succeeded in taking a steady stream of punishment. With one eye closed, blood dripped from a gash under the title-holder's right eye, his mouth was cut, he reeled, and his knees wobbled under the furious shower of Tunney's attack.

Desperately as Tunney tried, however, he could not bring Dempsey down. The champion, as he had done throughout the fight, absorbed his beating without giving much ground. In a final wild sally, he called his own guns into play, the weapons that had knocked out most of the men he ever faced, but this time they weren't loaded.

The crowd gave Tunney a tumultuous ovation before the judges' decision was announced. There was no doubt as to what it would be. Dozens of the more enthusiastic climbed into the ring and a squad of police had to clear it so that the announcer could make known the formal decision.

Tunney won eight of the ten rounds by so decisive a margin that no doubt was left of his supremacy. The Associated Press score sheet showed. None of the rounds was scored for the champion and only in the sixth and seventh was he conceded better than an even break. In both of these, it was more a case of Tunney's cautiousness than Dempsey's attacking success that affected the scoring.

ROUND ONE.

Time was called at 8:46. Dempsey rushed at Gene and had Gene in his own corner. After an exchange Dempsey sent right under the heart and swung left to the head. Jack forced Tunney to the ropes, belting him hard with both hands. Tunney drove a right to Jack's head. Jack continued to force it, making the challenger break ground. Tunney Dared Fate To Win the Title, Says Frank Getty Challenger Stepped in Where He "Didn't Have a Chance" and Won in Complete Mastery Over Touted Man-Killer.

BY FRANK GETTY,
United News Staff Correspondent.

Sesqui-Centennial Stadium, Philadelphia, September 23:—A man of destiny stepped into the land where they told him he didn't have a chance and won the world's heavyweight championship tonight before the greatest fight crowd in history.

Gene Tunney, who rose from an humble clerk in a Greenwich Village shop, became the champion of the world by outboxing, outfighting, and outgaming the man they thought was invincible—Jack Dempsey, holder of the title for seven years.

Dempsey went down to join the long line of champions who have lost their title in this fateful year, fighting like a true warrior.

His face was swollen to twice its natural size from the right-hand punches which Gene Tunney, amazing the sport world and surprising even his own backers, shot in at will throughout the bout.

With one eye closed, Dempsey wept out of the other as the referee announced that a new heavyweight champion of the world was about to be crowned.

With rain streaming from a lowering sky, which—at the last moment and for the first time broke Tex Rickard's record as a promoter of fair weather bouts, the judges, Mike Bernstein, of Wilkes-Barre and Frank Brown, of Pittsburgh, agreed that Tunney had so far whipped Jack Dempsey that the heavyweight championship for the first time in history must change hands on a decision.

Decision Clear.

Let no one think that there was any doubt about this decision.

From the opening bell until the last fateful clang, Gene not only outgeneralled the former champion, but took his heaviest punches, withstood them and struck back harder on his own behalf.

While 130,000 spectators looked on amazed, the new world's champion took all Dempsey had to give and fought his way to clean-cut victory through an attack quite as savage as the Manassa mauler ever unleashed, but one which lacked the power of old.

From a fight-mad city, more than 130,000 people, in automobiles, afoot and by airplane, came to the sesquicentennial stadium expecting to see Jack Dempsey returned an easy victor over his ambitious young lad from the lower West Side of New York.

They spoke of Gene Tunney as the boy with the face and manner of an Irish priest.

They made much of Gene's too obvious efforts to turn himself into a man of culture.

But they did not know that the fighting heart, cool head, and splendid body of this youngster were just what was needed to overcome the vaunted attributes of the former champion.

They came out of their corners for the first time and somehow before the echoes of the bell had died away, one could sense that Gene Tunney's dream of destiny was about to be fulfilled. Dempsey, slashing, rushing, and assuming a murderous fury which had been a part of his career and which always before had carried him to victory, failed to impress those who watched him closely.

The former champion rushed, backing Gene to the ropes while his left hooks wrapped around Tunney's stalwart neck and his short rights, aimed at the body, were being blocked by Tunney's stalwart arms.

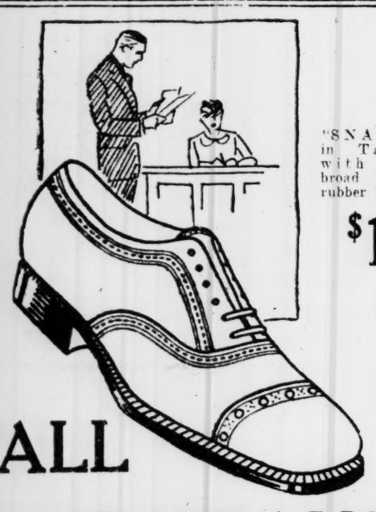

Gene Careful.

Gene made no effort to step into the teeth of this gale of punches which Dempsey threw at him. Instead, he stepped away, coolly and with a degree of caution which gave everyone an inkling of who was going to win. He brought up his right to Jack's jaw; he missed with a right. He brought up his left to the jaw and for the first time since one blistering July day, more than seven years ago, a fight crowd saw Jack Dempsey take second place in the first round of a fight.

In the second round Dempsey continued his tactics of trying to impress both Tunney and the judges that he was a man-eater. He drew blood from Gene's mouth. He looked like the Dempsey of old, but he wasn't.

When they stood off and slugged,

Cincinnati Battles Philly 15 Innings To 6-to-6 Draw

Contest Is Finally Called by Darkness; St. Louis Is Idle

New York, September 23.—(AP)—A thrilling 15-inning battle with the Philadelphia Nationsl today gave the Cincinnati Reds no chance to draw up on the league-leading St. Louis Nationals. Darkness halted the struggle with both teams tied 6 to 6.

The Cardinals, idle today, have a two-and-a-half-game lead with only three more games to be played. A Cincinnati loss today would have forced the Reds to win their three remaining games, while St. Louis was losing three in order to tie for the flag. The St. Louis fray with New York was postponed until Friday because of the Dempsey-Tunney fight in Philadelphia.

No games were played in the American league today, leaving the New York Yankees still two games in front of the Cleveland Indians.

John Is Back

John Contos is back in town.

And though he comes back with the full assurance of again putting on the first-class wrestling shows that he offered Atlanta wrestling fans last winter, he brings a bit of bad news with him. Jimmy Londos, who performed in Atlanta a number of times last year, broke three ribs in an endurance wrestling contest at Long Beach last week, John says. It seems that Jimmy was taking all comers, and after three hours or more at the strenuous practice, he swung one of his victims up over his head and in some manner the ribs cracked.

However, things are somewhat rosy for John. He is planning another series of shows this winter, the first of which is to be staged about the first of next month. He says that he is planning to bring in a bunch of new wrestlers, and no doubt they will prove as satisfactory to Atlanta fans as his last contingent of mat artists were.

Ansley Is Winner In Capital City Club Tournament

Though he had lost six straight holes to J. L. Dickey in the last round of the semi-finals of the Capital City club championship tourney at Brookhaven after having ended the first 18 holes eight up, Harry Ansley came back and won five straight to end the 36-hole match play, 7 and 6, on Dickey and advance into the finals. He won the club championship by defeating Spratlin three up.

In the round before the semi-finals, Ansley won from Nunnally, while Dickey defeated Edmondson, 2 up. Spratlin won from Fleming, one up and Adams defeated Shropshire. Ansley won from Dickey and Spratlin from Adams to advance into the finals.

SHORT, LIGHT WORKOUTHELD BY JACKETS

BY C. F. THOMPSON.

The Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets rounded off with a light workout Thursday afternoon, and with a repetition of the program this afternoon will be prepared for the opening affray with the Oglethorpe Petrels Saturday.

There's still a lot of room for improvement in the Tech squad, though they showed Thursday afternoon that they were not as bad even as the day before, and though there was only a very few moments dedicated in the day's practice to aerial attack, this department of offense showed up much better than that of the day before.

But still another Tech weakness was revealed. It lies in the punting section of the Tornado. While the ends got off in fine shape running down under punts, and while the punters could boot for between 35 and 40 yards while not in scrimmage line, the scrubs scrimmage line showed up the punting woefully.

The afternoon also was spent in perfecting aerial defense, in which some mighty good work was shown, blocking center and a short and snappy signal drill. Running interference was also indulged in, and while the showing in the latter was ragged at first, the coaches continued putting it through until the wedge was working in first-class shape.

NASH WINNER IN PALMER GOLF TOURNEY

After winning the opening round to climb to the championship of the 101 Marietta street building with a 69 in Thursday morning's medal play, Bill Nash, construction manager of the Turner Construction company, shot a 72 in the final round at Brookhaven country club Thursday afternoon to win the championship of the Palmer Properties golf tournament.

F. W. Allcorn, who shot a 67 to win the Palmer building entries, shot a 74 in the final playoff while W. A. Walker who won the morning round among the Glenn building entries with a 70 was shooting a 75 in the final round.

M. B. Arnold was runner-up to Nash in the morning round with a 71. M. Oliver Nix shot a 69 to place him second to Allcorn in the Palmer building entries while W. M. Butler finally placed as runner-up to Walker in the Glenn building entries after a nine hold playoff with T. Phillips. He had Phillips had both turned in cards of 73 for the first round.

E. M. Norton won the consolation trophy in the 101 Marietta street entries, John M. Brown in the Palmer building entries and W. L. Mattox in the Glenn building entries.

Fittery To Hurl For Power Nine

When the Pep class and the Power Company tie up at Piedmont Park Saturday, both teams will face left handed batters in the battle for the city's amateur title. Paul Fittery, former major league pitcher, will hurl for the Power company and Ford will be sent to the mound by the Peps.

From an examination of batting average, both teams appear to be evenly matched. The Peps have four men, batting .400 or better, while the Power company has two. Both teams have men batting over .300.

BRAVES NOSE OUT PIRATES.

Boston, September 23.—The world champion Pirates fell victims to Boston's late-season drive today, the Braves defeating Pittsburgh 2 to 1. Singles by J. Smith, Welch and High, together with an error by Rhyne and Moore's sacrifice fly, accounted for Boston's two runs in the first inning. Traynor's single after Grantham's double in the fifth gave the visitors their run.

Brooklyn only made 14 runs in eight games last week. The tightest ball was played by the Boston Braves with 16 runs for themselves and 14 for their opponents. Why the Braves finished near the bottom will remain the mystery of the league.

HAWK-EYE-ING SPORTS

·BY · DICK · HAWKINS·

The Suprise of the Year.

Tell us that Sammy Mandell could lick Luis Firpo in the first round with one hand tied behind him—tell us that Rene Fonck could fly across the ocean with two pin feathers and an electric fan—tell us that Al Smith was just elected social secretary of the W. C. T. U.—awgowan, tell us anything and we will believe it now, for Gene Tunney has beaten the cauliflower crown from the pate of one Manassa mauler in 10 of the "upsettiest" rounds ever milled under the bright lights of the squared ring.

And one of the worst parts of the whole business is that we cannot say "I told you so," because we did not "told you so." Not claiming to be in personal contact with the situation, we followed the lead of the nation's greatest sport writers and conceded Dempsey an easy victory.

After it is all over except the alibis of the authorities who bet the also-ran on the nose, there is but one question to settle—how did Tunney do it?

Looking at the round-by-round detail from three great wire services, we have the dope this way. The great Dempsey was outgeneraled from first bell to last gong. His uncanny timing of blows was not there. He started his old-time leading fight and was forced to abandon his greatest asset because he could not make his blows land. On two occasions Dempsey missed swings and fell into the ropes. He hit Tunney several times, but only once did he rock the ex-marine. The reason was that Gene was going away when the blows landed. Any time Jack Dempsey hits a man when he is coming in, that man must suffer, but Gene Tunney did not come in unless Jack was going away. The challenger went in the ring to take advantage of what he believed to be a weakness in the timing and footwork of the champion, and he found both of these suppositions to be true. He took advantage of them and won.

There may be one good result from the outcome of the big maul. Many amateur gamblers may suffer from a serious case of dyspepsia and swear off betting on prize fights. It has been a pitiful conversation over the sports phone here tonight more than once.

Says the questioner: "How is the fight?"
Says we: "Tunney won the decision."
Says the Q.: "What?"
Says we (more or less patiently): "Tunney won the decision."

Says the Q.: "Tunney won? Well, I'll be——, (and the receiver goes up with a hopeless movement, indicating that it is the glambler, not the woman, who pays.

It is a year for the fall of the champions—Tilden, Jones, Dempsey—?

Local Prep Gridiron Season Opens Today

BY BEN COTHRAN.

Tech High and Decatur will pry the well-known lid off the prep football season this afternoon, when the Smithies meet the Oglethorpe freshmen at Spiller's, and Decatur plays East Point at Decatur.

These are the only two games to be played this week-end and the rest of the prep loop will swing into action next week.

Coach Tolbert wound his training yesterday afternoon after sending the Smithies through a lengthy signal drill, and ending up with a light workout.

All of the Smithie injured have recovered and are ready to play this afternoon, Charles Bardwell, who had been out for a few days on account of injury, returned to the lineup in fine shape and will be one of those present at the kick-off.

Waugh, flashy little back, on whom Tolbert was counting to direct the team in the field, became sick Tuesday afternoon and has been out ever since, and will not be able to play this afternoon. Battle will probably be started in his place.

Tech High has good prospects for a prominent prep eleven this year, and has plenty of weight in the line, with speed in the backfield. Coach Tolbert has been worrying about his backfield somewhat because of its inexperience, but believes that it will come through and deliver the goods.

The Smithies will probably lineup for the game as follows:

Davis and Gifford, ends; Wade and Fountain, tackles; Fred Maddox and Rasnake, guards; Williams, center; Battle, quarter; Hammond and Johnson, halves; Bardwell, full.

Decatur High had several old men returned from last year, and with the addition of new men, is expected to make a very good showing.

The brightest light in the backfield during the early practice has been Henry Morris, who comes to Decatur from Boys' High. Morris is playing at fullback, and showed up well in scrimmage with his heavy line plunging.

The game will be played on the Decatur campus at 2:30 o'clock.

The rest of the preps are hard at work preparing for next week. Out at University, Hoke Freeman was lost to the squad for at least a month and a half on account of an injury. The school was cheered by the announcement, however, that Arthur McHenry had returned to school. McHenry had intended working this year, but R. K. White, president of the school, announced Thursday that he had reentered.

Fight Lights

Ringside, Sesqui-centennial Stadium, Philadelphia, September 23.—(AP)—Getting into the gigantic sesqui arena tonight was as bad as running an old-time gauntlet or passing through the customs line at a port of entry. Sixteen policemen, six ushers, two firemen and one official bouncer scrutinized the early ticket-holders and their pasteboards.

Eleven batteries of incandescent lights, the most powerful group ever turned on an arena, blazed upon the swirling vista of humanity. Over the ring 37 cone-shaped lamps glared down upon the scene of combat.

Jack McAuliffe, old undefeated lightweight champion, who once defended his title in a 75-round fight—London prize ring rules—for a small side bet and before a gallery of 500, was a member of the $1,750,000 crowd. "Some people," said Jack, "were born lucky. The rest of us were born right after the civil war."

Battling Nelson, who, almost twenty years ago, fought Joe Gans for Tex Rickard in the premier promoter's first big pugilistic venture at Goldfield, Nev., sat, mouth agape, for five minutes, awed by the spectacle.

Jack Skelly, who used to evade the law and fight on a barge anchored in the middle of the Hudson river, echoed McAuliff's observation.

Clustered about the ring some 300 correspondents, filing the news of the spectacle to all parts of the world, worked as feverishly as their allotment of 16 inches of space per person would admit. A complicated network of 92 wires carried close to 1,000,000 words, with the blow-by-blow descriptive going to Australia, South America and all of the big European countries.

John C. Kennedy, claiming to be 90 years of age and a native of San Francisco, drove his own flivver to the battle ground and bought a $5.50 ticket for $10 from a speculator. He scorned the offer of a set of binoculars, declaring his eyes as good as any youngster's.

"Digger" MacPherson, a six-footer from the "out-back" country of Australia, who aspires to be a heavyweight fighter, spent three years' savings to see the battle.

Red Rock Ginger Ale is often prescribed by the best physicians for ordinary stomach troubles and it sure gives relief—Try it.

Woman Abandons Channel Attempt

Dover, September 23.—(AP)—Miss Lorena Marriott ("Jane Darwin") abandoned her attempt to cross the English channel from France at noon today after swimming 15 hours.

The Athletics' pitchers are beginning to show the kind of stuff which was expected of them earlier in the season. Ed Rommel held the hard-hitting Tigers to two safe blows Monday, and take it from the rest of the American league pitchers, that is some feat.

PRE-SEASON TRAINING ENDS FOR BULLDOGS

BY MARCUS BRYANT.

Athens, Ga., September 23.—Georgia's Bulldogs will gallop through their final workout tomorrow afternoon as the final preparatory step for the Mercer game Saturday opening the season for both elevens.

This afternoon varsity teams fought among themselves in a scrimmage lasting almost one hour. Jack Heirs, reserve end, was injured in the tussle the extent of which is not known tonight. It will be remembered that Walter Fleming, reserve back, stepped into the lime light last season in the opener against the Bears and he distinguished himself today at a halfback position. His condition is anything except the best, however, due to sickness.

Nothing definite as to the starting lineup may be established, but the Bulldogs will probably take the field in the following order: Huff and Shivar, ends; Morris and Luckie, tackles; Rogers and Leffler, guards; Forbes, center; Broadnax, quarter, Morton and Hatcher, halves; and Boland fullback.

There are, of course, likely changes, for three complete teams have been used and either of the trio might be hurled against the Bears when the opening whistle is sounded. Injuries remain a menace to Bulldog hopes, holding six veterans and a reserve hors de combat for the clash.

The Mercer squad will arrive in Athens Saturday morning, determined to avenge the 32 to 0 defeat administered them last year at the hands of the Red and Black.

Cracker - Soldier Exhibition Sunday

Although most fans have turned their thoughts to football and championship prize fights, the soldiers at Fort McPherson and the Atlanta Crackers are still thinking of baseball, and the Crackers will stage another farewell appearance at Fort McPherson Sunday afternoon.

The Sunday team is not all new crop, for each man has worn a Cracker uniform at one time or another. Dutch Krehmeyer and Sammy Mayer will be remembered from teams of former years, and Red Smith and Paul Fittery played in Atlanta not so long ago.

The game will be played at the Fort Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and athletic officials are making preparations for a large crowd as this will probably be the last time that the Crackers will appear together this year.

The Crackers will line-up Sunday as follows: Nichoff, 2b, Krehmeyer ss, Barrett 3b, Smith lf, Mayer cf, McLaughlin rf, Ray Francis p, Brock c, Fittery 1b.

Farrell and Golden Win Golf Matches In Brilliant Games

Garden City, N. Y., September 23.—(AP)—The thin links battle line of the south and middlewest broke under whirlwind finishes today and a quartet of metropolitan players, including Walter Hagen, stepped through the gaps into the semi-final round of the professional golf association championship.

Until midafternoon every favorite in the hunt appeared threatened by dogged, determined pursuit, with Harry Hampton, of Memphis, Tenn., and Abe Espinosa, of Chicago, carrying on in the face of almost unbeatable golf. But in the end they yielded to stroking which slashed the difficult par of Salisbury to shreds and swept Johnny Farrell, Leo Diegel and Johnny Golden along with Hagen to the most impressive victories of the event.

A mixture of phenomenal putting and fortunate breaks saved Farrell in a desperately fought match with Hampton, three and one, while Espinosa forced Diegel to go to the top of his game for a three-and-two victory.

The two other duels of the third round ended in routs, however. Hagen pulled away from Pat Doyle, of White Plains, N. Y., to win at 6 and 5, after battling for 23 holes on even terms, and at the same time Golden, playing just behind the champion, followed suit with another crushing finish to topple George Chris, of Rochester, N. Y., 7 and 6.

Starting under a drizzle this morning Hagen immediately encountered difficulty holding the greens on his approaches. He was repeatedly short in his pitching, while his first putts time after time failed to roll within easy sinking distance. The damp grass, on the other hand, failed to affect the game of the White Plains man, who closed with two shots almost the length of the green on the 17th and 18th to cut the champion's margin to a single hole.

New Orleans Pelicans Win First Dixie Series Game

Seventh Frame Rally By Pels Overwhelms Steers; Score 5 to 1

Martina and Love Stage Hard Fought Duel As Opposing Moundsmen—Dallas Run Comes in First Inning.

New Orleans, La., September 23.—(AP)—New Orleans went on a batting rampage against Dallas in the "lucky seventh" of the first game of the Dixie series here today, scoring five runs and enough to win, 5 to 1.

Dallas, after pushing a run across in the second inning, failed to score again. New Orleans, although landing a man on base virtually every inning, was unable to score on Love, former major league player, until the eleventh, when they touched him for five hits and he gave them two bases on balls to net the home team a total of five runs.

Hendrick started the rally with a single. Vick followed with another single and Tucker was given a pass to first. Lingle, batting for Ostergaard, forced Hendrick at home. Deal then singled to center field, scoring Vick and Tucker. Love fanned Ewoldt and walked Dowie to fill the bases. Lingle scored when Martina, pitcher, beat out a bunt and Deal and Dowie reached the plate on Whaley's double.

Martina, veteran New Orlean hurler, and Love were both wild, "Oyster" Joe walking nine batters and the left-handed Texan issuing six bases on balls. Their inability to put the pill across the plate with regularity was the main reason that the affair lasted two hours and thirty-five minutes.

The game was called at the end of the seventh on account of darkness.

V. M. I. READY FOR SEASON'S SECOND GAME

Lexington, Va., September 23.—The V. M. I. team that meets the University of Richmond Spiders on Alumni field Saturday, will have practically the same line-up as that of the opening game with Wofford. Ralph Smith, freshman captain last year, may replace Mose at end, and Herman Kulp, regular tackle last year, will probably return to his old berth. This change will shift Hewlett to guard, where he will replace Red Kearney.

Smith and Kulp have both been victims of an epidemic of boils, but Trainers Gorton and Player hope to have them ready to start Saturday. Jim Smith, 260-pound guard, and Ned Yates, substitute end, have also been sporting a collection of boils, and will continue to remain on the hospital list. Others on the Cadet squad have been on the hospital list as a result of boils and minor injuries, but Blandy Clarkson and Bill Raftery hope to have practically their full strength on the field when the Cadets take the field against the Spiders.

LaGrange Begins Schedule Today

The LaGrange High school, state high school football champions last season, will open the 1926 season in LaGrange Friday against Opelika High. Coach Gressette is facing a problem in building this year's team, having lost 11 letter men. Only five letter men are returning, three of which are backfield men. They are Captain Belden, fullback; Ferrell and Benton, halves, with Powers and Hutchinson in the line.

Out of the 40 candidates that have been in practice for two weeks comes some good prospects and chances for another undefeated season look bright.

Coach Gressette is starting his fourth year as mentor at LaGrange, having been defeated only four times on the gridiron in that time. Last season the locals went through the season without a defeat after playing Carrollton A. & M., Rome High, Columbus High, Decatur High, Marietta High, Athens High, Bethlehem college, Greenville High, Boys' High, of Atlanta, and Albany High.

LaGrange has won 22 consecutive games. The new $10,000 athletic field has been completed with temporary seats arranged to accommodate a large crowd and will be used this season.

Crowd Begins Pouring Into Stadium Hours Before Opening Gong

Tex Rickard Coolly Poses For Photographers — Peggy Joyce Pulls For Overthrown King—Opera Glasses Plentiful.

BY FRANK GETTY.

Sesqui-Centennial Stadium, Philadelphia, September 23.—Spreading its magnificent distances in graceful ellipses around the canvas square upon which the greatest of heavyweight championships was to be fought, the big concrete stadium of the sesqui-centennial acted as a magnet upon the thousands of fight fans from far and near who had come to this almost delirious city for the battle.

Long before the sun broke through the rain clouds and fulfilled the familiar prediction that Tex Rickard could not pick bad weather for a fight, the first of 130,000 customers were streaming down the roads leading to the sesqui grounds.

Sprinkled through the vast expanse of concrete, they were mere dots at first, the earliest and most patient of the fans.

Then little groups gathered and gradually the excited, chatting throng spread across the gray seats until not a vacant space could be seen.

The weather, some four hours before the fight, proved all that could be desired. Coats came off in the heat of the sunset and the clouds which had caused apprehension early Thursday vanished from a clear blue sky.

Among the first to arrive at the stadium was Tex Rickard, who sauntered in as coolly as if putting on a heavyweight championship fight was all part of a day's work with him.

Accompanied by the local "promoters," who have proved mere figureheads in this affair, Tex crawled through the ropes, looked over the gathering throng, and had his picture taken by an importunate little group of photographers.

The celebrities, and this fight drew more famous folk than any previous sporting event in history, delayed their arrival until the shades of night brought out the brilliant flood lights which turned the stadium back into day.

Some of the officers at Camp Anthony Wayne, in the sesqui grounds, obtained permission to take up a blimp, and from its silver heights looked down upon the scene.

The contestants in this most widely advertised prize fight kept in hiding until shortly before the time set for their appearance in the ring.

Gene Tunney pulled a stunt never before associated with fisticuffs by flying down from his training quarters at Stroudsburg with that reliable pilot, Charles S. "Casey" Jones. Despite the fact that a matter of some $2,000,000, to say nothing of other millions wagered upon the fight, was involved, Gene stepped into the pursuit plane at Shawnee-on-the-Delaware as debonairly as if he were going out to tea. The flight was concluded without an incident but there were many who breathed easier when they heard the challenger had arrived safely. Tunney made this trip without Tex Rickard's permission. The promoter never would have consented to take a chance on an accident or forced landing which would have kept Gene from arriving for his engagement.

It was officially announced that the attendance was 130,000 and that the gate receipts were in excess of $2,000,000.

LOUISVILLE IS HOST TO GEORGIA EDITORS

Louisville, Ga., September 23.—(Special.)—Vanguards of the Georgia Press association began to arrive here early today. Many coming by automobile, and others arriving on different trains which were met by large delegations of Louisville citizens to bid the editors welcome to the former capital of Georgia, for their annual meet. Ample accommodations have been made for the royal entertainment of all visitors and Louisville is determined to give the writers the time of their lives.

The Central of Georgia railway has announced special trains for the convenience of those who come by rail. The new president of the Central railway, J. J. Pelley, arrived tonight in his private car with several other railway officers. Prominent representatives of many of the daily papers and other periodicals of the state are on hand.

Ernest Camp, president of the Georgia Press association, arrived this afternoon in company with 40 or more other editors who were met at Wadley by a committee of prominent citizens of Louisville.

John R. Phillips, member of the State highway board, made the address of welcome, responded to by Ernest Camp, presiding officer of the convention. Music and songs interspersed the program which was featured by the address of Hollins Randolph, of Atlanta, of the Stone Mountain memorial, which was characterized as a great spiritual asset to the south. The evening's program was concluded by a reception given by Mrs. Virginia Price, editor of the News and Farmer at her home.

Tomorrow the sessions will be held at the Jefferson county court house and a barbecue and banquet will be the entertainment offered the visitors.

PNEUMONIA TAKES ADMIRAL FULLAM

Pegler Describes Fight for Title

And above the wail of the voice, scoring Tunney's lefts and rights to the jaw came the sodden detonations of Tunney's fists, driving, unimpeded through the downpour of rain that made slanting silver streaks across the glow of the ring lights, against Dempsey's chin.

Dempsey didn't go down but his seconds were working on his legs as early as the end of the third round and when the fight was over and he knew without hearing the official decision that he had lost his championship. He reeled into his corner with his head rolling on his chest and flopped into the arms of Philadelphia Jack O'Brien.

Unlike Old Jack.

With his carpentered nose, with his dainty approach, with his face clean-shaven in a fight for the first time in his career, Dempsey didn't even look like the Jack Dempsey who used to spring through the ropes in a raveled red sweater jacket and go tearing at his man, driving a left forearm as big as an ordinary man's calf. He jogged around the ring and later he reeled, with his face lowered and his forearms raised, trying to defend himself, instead of attacking. It's true that Dempsey kept on coming to Tunney until the very last, but that was only because he never learned to make the other fellow come to him. He wasn't attacking because when he came close he didn't even try to punch. He was just walking into his punishment and as he came within range, Tunney's gloves chunked him on the chin from both sides and set his head to toppling.

The rain started with a faint sprinkle as the fighters sat in their corners sedately winding long white ribbons of gauze bandage over their knuckles and up their wrists. There was Jimmy Bronson, who handled Gene Tunney somewhere in France, as an athletic director when Gene was a marine and fighting for medals in the athletic field days of the American expeditionary forces after the armistice. Jimmy was dressed in harmony with the moot refinement of Gene Tunney, probably the first man that ever went through the ropes as a second in a world championship fight wearing golf knickers, the regalia of the gentleman's game. There was Billy Gibson, who used to run a horse barn fight club in New York and who has managed many a fighter who didn't know a participle from a paragraph. Although he may be committed to refinement as an institution, Billy Gibson came into the ring in his vest and shirt sleeves and wearing a cap for the sake of the old regime. There was Lew Fink and there was also one Lew Brix, trainers for Tunney.

Bronson, an incongruous figure in his bloomers, walked across the Dempsey

The refinement of the prize fight business has not yet gone so far that the boys, or gentlemen as they may now be termed, will trust one another to put on the bandages sight unseen. So they wound and wound. Then they unwound a few layers and rewound. And as they taped their hands and finally slid their knuckles into the new russet gloves with the blue laces, the rain gathered force and began to spatter on the paper in the typewriters. The telegraph operators drew the oilcloths over their machines. The 130,000 customers who had paid $2,000,000 and more to be present at the coronation of Gene Tunney, reached under their seats for the coats they had put aside in the sweltering hours of the afternoon and early evening.

Those who hadn't brought coats drew up the collars of their jackets and yanked their hats over their eyes.

Necessity being the prolific mother that she is, here and there ingenious customers slit the cushions that had been peddled about the crowd at a rental of 50 cents, shook the stuffing out onto the ground and used the oilcloth covering for slickers. Hope Hampton, a late queen of the movies, sitting in the front row, got up, drew on a cloak of some gaudy fur and sank into its folds. Newspapers bloomed over the crowd as protection for hats. The fighters probably did not know it was raining for Dempsey was selling out the stock and fixtures of the most prosperous film that ever did business in the ring for somewhere around $800,000 and Tunney was slugging him from rope to rope for a fortune that will run to at least a million.

Dempsey showed fight just twice in 10 rounds and they had fought 9 of the 30 minutes before he roused himself for the first time. In the fourth round after Tunney had smashed him from corner to corner with impudent disregard for the great Dempsey who used to hammer them down in a rush, the fading champ came off his steel as though he had sat on a tack and tagged Tunney on the chin with a left hook before he could stir out of his own corner. As Tunney bent from the blow, Dempsey was on him with a right to the jaw and Gene's body sagged back over the top rope with Dempsey leaning on him and pounding at the body. But Gene grabbed Dempsey's arms, pushed him off and came up. Tommy Reilly, the referee, jumped in to part them. In the sixth Dempsey batted Tunney with a left to the neck, just under the chin, and Gene's feet tangled as he tottered sidewise. Then Tunney resumed his cautious practice of backing away and making Dempsey plunge at him, whereat he whipped over the left and right to the jaw.

Dempsey's nose began to show wear and tear in the third round when it bled a little but his seconds staunched the flow when the round was over. In the fourth, one of Tunney's smashes to the face gashed the flesh of Dempsey's right cheek and the ensuing punches smeared his face with a gory lather. The champion's seconds staunched that, too, but when Tunney's right closed Dempsey's left eye early in the tenth they could only let him totter through to the end.

The first punch raised a puff over the eye, and the ensuing bombardment not only closed it tight but gashed the eyebrow and raised a gruesome purple knob as big as an egg on his cheek bone. Gore dropped from Dempsey's puffed lips as he struggled to keep his feet to the finish, and his jaw dangled limp. He was almost out then, and if they had fought in New York, where 15 rounds are permitted, Tunney would have knocked him out.

Benny Leonard, who watched the fight from the press row, said afterwards that for the first five rounds he was inclined to credit the inevitable rumors before the fight that Dempsey was bound to lose. Leonard was not alone in his bewilderment as the tigerish Dempsey, who used to come out slashing and tearing, welcomed chances to clinch with Gene and weakly waved his arms in attempts to block the punches that were knocking him into coma.

Dempsey's strength was gone. Perhaps, he left it in the movie studios or in the cabarets of Paris, or on the road in the thousand-odd miles of running that he reeled off in the last seven months trying to come back as the Dempsey he used to be. Anyway, Gene Tunney could grasp his arms and twist them aside, and the realization that here was a fellow who could handle him must have taken the heart out of Dempsey.

The fight ended about 10:30 o'clock. It took 30 minutes to get from the ringside to the catacombs beneath the stadium where the auxiliary wires were rigged up to carry the story after the ringside wires were drowned out.

Tunney Dared Fate To Win

Gene beat him to the punch. Tunney stood toe to toe and swapped punches with Jack, and it was the former champion who backed away.

Two rounds for Tunney.

The rain, which had held off, during most of the evening, began to fall. Dempsey's seconds, Gene Normile, Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, Jerry The Greek and Gus Wilson, smeared him with grease, as if he was about to swim the English channel.

This is against the rule, but so are many other things that Jack Dempsey has done, during the years since he won the championship.

They came out for the third. Jack swung a wicked right, missed, and was glad to tumble into a clinch. Tunney began sticking an irritating left jab into Dempsey's face. Right there Dempsey began bobbing, weaving, ducking shifting and using all the ring lore which his 15 years of fighting have taught him. But, Tunney jobbed him with that left and crossed him with a right which, while it was not deadly, was still effective enough to open a cut under Jack's right eye.

Dempsey Desperate.

All right. They came out for the fourth into this extraordinary situation. Dempsey was far, far behind. He knew it. He led with lefts and rights to the head, and a left hook landing on Tunney's ear, while the big marine was backed again the ropes, nearly drove Gene out of the ring.

The blood cry of the pack went up, and everyone thought that the fight was over. As a matter of fact, Gene was not hurt. He weathered the storm, slugged toe to toe with Dempsey and a right uppercut to the famous paraffine nose spattered blood over Dempsey's face.

An even round, perhaps, but the only round of the entire 10 allowed by the prize rings of Pennsylvania in which Jack Dempsey honestly can be said to have held his own.

From then on, Gene Tunney, the new world's champion, took the play away from the man they said could not be beaten.

Round after round, Tunney sustained the simulated fury of Dempsey's attack, and beat him, punch for punch, long before the round in question was over.

For an indefinite time, men—and women, too—will be asking how it happened.

The answer is this: The Jack Dempsey who tried in vain to defend the title, of which he was so proud, was not the Jack Dempsey of a few years ago.

Jack fooled everyone — including himself. He thought, and he told everyone, that he was as good as ever. But the three years during which he was away from the ring had taken an incalculable toll.

Farms and Land for Sale 83

NORTH SIDE ACREAGE

ONE-HALF MILE FRONTAGE ON RIVER

Of the limited amount of Chattahoochee river acreage there is but little available. Wise investors have been buying this property for some time and there are but a few tracts which may be had at any price. Of these we offer one of the most desirable and it is what might be called a distress sale. The owners need money at once and the price of less than $100 per acre will indicate. This property is in that part of Fulton county recently acquired from Milton county and there is every indication that roads will be improved as rapidly as possible as has previously been the custom. There are more than 200 acres in this tract and it may be sold as a whole or in part. Take advantage of this opportunity, it is our prediction that river acreage wherever located in Fulton county will bring $200 per acre within three years. Call Mr. Morgan, WAlnut 1891.

Judge Dorsey Answers Holder On Judgeship 'Trade' Charge

Indignantly denying campaign charges made by John N. Holder to the effect that Governor Clifford Walker named former-Governor Hugh M. Dorsey, judge of the city court of Atlanta in return for a promise that Dr. L. G. Hardman would appoint Walker chairman of the highway board when he is elected governor, Judge Dorsey Thursday issued a statement scoring what he termed the political motives behind Mr. Holder's words.

"I had it impossible to believe that Mr. Holder would deliberately manufacture a libel against the governor of Georgia, or against me," Judge Dorsey said, "and I prefer to believe that the inexcusable and anonymous slander was born of the brain of the professional hijackers who are driving his political craft upon the rocks."

Judge Dorsey's card in full follows:

"Editor The Constitution: Hon. John Holder is quoted, in your report of his speech made in Lexington, Ga., on last Wednesday, as follows:

It is currently reported in Atlanta, and generally accepted as a fact, that he (Dr. Hardman) traded with certain friends of ex-Governor Hugh Dorsey, and agreed to appoint Governor Walker chairman of the state highway board if Governor Walker would appoint Governor Dorsey judge, and it is said the governor entered into this trade, although he had promised the judgeship to another well-known Atlanta lawyer.

"The speech, as quoted, does not state by whom 'it is currently reported' and accepted as a fact, or 'it is said' that the alleged trade was made, and, therefore, in spite of my aversion to newspaper cards, there is no other method by which I can relieve the governor of Georgia and myself from the stigma of the statement that is as unjust as it is untrue.

"No one who knows me will give even passing credit to the statement, and those who are unacquainted with me will be equally disposed to discredit a charge of this nature, launched under the pressure of political exigency and without the responsibility of authorship.

"My acceptance of the appointment involved financial sacrifice, being based upon the sentimental consideration that my father, Judge R. T. Dorsey, had, in his lifetime, occupied the position to which I was appointed.

"There was no suggestion of trade or barter in connection with the appointment, and the first intimation, directly or indirectly, I ever had from any source, of any trade on the subject, was derived from the speech Mr. Holder is reported to have made.

"I find it difficult to believe that Mr. Holder would deliberately manufacture a libel against the governor of Georgia, or against me, and I prefer to believe that the inexcusable and anonymous slander was born of the brain of the professional hijackers who are driving his political craft upon the rocks."

(Signed) "HUGH M. DORSEY."

Farm Body Urged To Favor Southern Muscle Shoals Bid

Power Companies Will Lower Cost of Fertilizer and Aid Rural Communities, Says Morton.

An urgent appeal that the American Farm Bureau federation, now in session at Florence, Ala., "support the report of the joint committee of congress in favor of the bid of the Southern Power companies for Muscle Shoals" was made Thursday night in a message wired the president and directors of that organization by James W. Morton, of Athens. Mr. Morton, one of the original members of the executive committee of the federation and former president of the Georgia Farm Bureau federation, is deeply interested in Muscle Shoals as it affects the southern farmer and his message is expected to have much weight at the meeting.

The federation was invited to Alabama to discuss the situation and inspect Muscle Shoals.

Mr. Morton is a farmer and has taken much interest in national organizations for the farmer. While a member of the American Farm Bureau federation he was a member of a special committee which visited Muscle Shoals and voted in favor of the Ford bid.

Plans Under Way.

In discussing the two bids Mr. Morton declared that he believed the bid of the Southern Power companies would be of greatest benefit to the farmer, in view of the growing importance of electric power in farm work. Plans are already under way, he said, for rural electrification, and the Southern Power companies are working jointly with the Georgia Agricultural college in perfecting these plans.

The national federation convened at Florence Thursday and will close the session today. While it is not definitely known whether a vote on the two bids will be taken today, it is understood that the federation will indicate its favor between the two bids.

Cooperating with Mr. Morton in interest of the Southern Power companies is the Georgia association. F. H. Abbott, secretary and manager of the Georgia association, stated Thursday night that all directors in the association had been mailed copies of Mr. Morton's message and said that he felt Mr. Morton's position on the subject would be backed to the limit by his organization. Mr. Abbott previously had written Mr. Morton concerning the meeting and asked him to indicate to the president and directors of the national federation his feelings in the matter.

Morton's Telegram.

The telegram sent to the federation by Mr. Morton follows:

"As one of the original members of the executive committee of the American Farm Bureau federation and as former president of the Georgia Farm Bureau federation and one vitally interested in the future of this great organization in its program of service to agriculture in the United States I desire earnestly to urge your support of the report of the joint committee of congress in favor of the bid of the Southern Power companies for Muscle Shoals.

"I believe it would endanger the future usefulness of the American Farm Bureau federation to commit itself in favor of a localized use of power at Muscle Shoals as against the widest possible distribution of power for the benefit of organized agriculture production and manufacture everywhere. With the rapid utilization of legumes in the manufacture of organic nitrogen on our southern farms the importance of fertilizer production at the Muscle Shoals plant assumes constantly diminishing importance in our agriculture. With the rapid increase of farmers cooperatives hydroelectric power to aid in profitable manufacture and marketing of farm products is relatively far more important than the manufacture of nitrogen for fertilizer.

"While I understand these two bids are similar with regard to fertilizer manufacture, I believe that the Southern Power companies, because of their dependence for ultimate sale of power upon prosperous agriculture, can be counted upon to furnish fertilizer to farmers at lowest possible price regardless of their bids. Already the Southern Power companies are cooperating with Georgia agricultural colleges in working out model plans for rural electrification. I commend to your careful attention editorial, September 2 issue, of Manufacturers Record, on this subject. I sincerely hope that you will carefully weigh the findings of the congressional committee and their decision in favor of a south-wide development in national agricultural program as against a development largely centralized and localized in a certain small section of the south.

"I was member special committee farm bureau federation which created Muscle Shoals and voted in favor Ford bid."

ENTRIES TO CLOSE FOR FAIR EXHIBITS

Practically all departments of the Southeastern fair were filled with entries Thursday night, one week before the formal opening next Saturday, it was announced by Oscar Mills, vice president and general manager.

Entries close Saturday of this week in the cattle, goat, swine, sheep, agricultural and horticultural shows, in which nearly half of the $100,000 premium money has been offered. Livestock from at least 20 states, including 40 Georgia counties, will be exhibited in competition. Every available space for county and individual agricultural displays had been taken la. Saturday, a week before the close of entries. This condition developed in spite of the fact that the size of the display units was decreased by one-third for county displays and one-half for individual displays, in order to accommodate a larger number of exhibitors.

The next closing date for important departments of the fair will be Monday when statewide spelling bee, poultry, pigeon, woman's department and junior department entries close. The horse race entries close Tuesday, Georgia corn show entries Thursday, public school, Sunday school, college and community home demonstration, girls' club entries Thursday.

Work on preparation of the exhibits was begun in the agricultural, liberal arts and autmobile buildings Friday, following completion of the work of a corps of decorators working under Virgil Shepard for the last three weeks hanging flags, banners and bunting from the ceilings and festooning columns and archways in carnival attire.
